More Strikes Threaten With 500,000 Idle

MEAT PACKERS MAY WALK OUT FOR MORE MONEY

Steel Industry Closes More Plants As Coal Miners Remain At Home

By United Press
Strikes—exclusive of the coal miners' walkout—curtailed type-writing manufacturing in Connecticut and shrimp fishing in Florida and stopped public schooling in two midwestern communities today.

Negotiators were seeking to avert other strikes which if called, would put radio stars off the air and halt meat production throughout the nation.

Altogether, an estimated 500,000 workers were idled by labor disputes but the coal strike, spreading its effects over the nation's economy, accounted for all but a fraction of this number. Forty thousand workers were idled in the steel industry, in addition to the 400,000 striking United Mine Workers. They were reportedly laid off because coal supplies were insufficient to keep blast furnaces and open hearths burning.

Other labor developments included:

1—The Los Angeles evening Herald Express, largest newspaper west of Chicago, settled its labor disputes, signed a two year contract with the CIO American Newspaper Guild and announced that publication would resume Monday. The newspaper had shut down operations Sept. 4.

2—Fear of picketline violence subsided at the Allis-Chalmers farm equipment plant in suburban Milwaukee, strikebound for 212 days, as strikers announced that picketing would continue on a diminished scale until Monday.

At Hartford, Conn., some union employees of the Royal Typewriter company, struck for a 10 cents an hour wage increase.

In Florida two thirds of the shrimp fleet remained idle awaiting arrival of a federal labor conciliator to mediate an unofficial strike. Sixty boats were reported tied up, as fishermen sought to gain a 16 cents a pound increase in the price of shrimp.

The AFL teachers strike which has shutdown classes for 30,000 public high school and grade school pupils at St. Paul moved into its third day. In Iowa 91 pupils of four rural schools near Fort Dodge also enjoyed the third day of an unexpected vacation, as their five teachers remained on strike. Wages are the major issue in all of the teachers' strikes.

NAVY WILL TRY TO FLY LARGE PLANES AT POLE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—The Navy hoped today to make aviation history by flying normally land-based transport planes from the deck of an aircraft carrier during Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd's forthcoming antarctic expedition.

Such planes never have been borne aloft from a carrier, although B-25 medium bombers took off from the carrier Hornet in the 1942 raid on Tokyo.

The planes to be used in the unprecedented experiment are twin-engine transports the size of a commercial airliner and are known commercially as DC-3's, the Navy said.

Spy Hunt Is Expected In U. S. Soon

By Lyle C. Wilson
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Government plans to investigate Communist activities in the United States were headed almost inevitably today toward a spy hunt. The record of Communist activities in the western hemisphere shows two distinct methods of operation.

1. Bold public support of Russian foreign policies through avowedly Communist organizations and the more numerous and more effective Communist fronts.

2. Espionage conducted necessarily in secret through Russian and native citizens.

The government is approaching the problem raised by such activities from two directions. President Truman has named a presidential commission to report by Feb. 1 on existing safeguards against disloyalty and subversive activities within government departments.

The house committee on un-American activities has announced that after the new Republican congress meets, it will undertake to expose Communists and their sympathizers within the government. The committee intends, also, to extend its investigation generally through the country, with special attention to the charge that Hollywood is crawling with fellow travelers.

Mr. Truman's commission and the house committee could well prepare for their job by learning about the Communist espionage which has been going on in Canada. The dominion government has published a 733-page volume on the subject in the form of a royal commission report.

PRO-RED SPEECH IS DISCLOSED

Magazine Newsweek Quotes Elliott Roosevelt Talk Backing Russia

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The magazine Newsweek quoted "a reliable individual" today as saying that Elliott Roosevelt had made a pro-Russian speech at a Moscow reception given by a member of the American embassy staff.

The reception, Newsweek said, was in honor of the Russian chief of the American division of the all-union society for cultural relations with foreign countries.

The magazine said its informant was present at the reception and it quoted him as follows:

"Elliott started off by explaining that foreign correspondents have no more freedom in the United States than they have in Russia. Take, for instance, he said, the case of Ilya Ehrenburg. Throughout his recent stay in America the noted Soviet writer was followed by a state department agent. Moreover, he rightly refused to be registered as a foreign agent. The United States cannot expect the Russians to agree to an exchange of students and writers until the foreign agents registration act is repealed, said Elliott.

EGYPTIAN POLICE SHOOT AT STUDENTS AT CAIRO

CAIRO, Nov. 27—Egyptian police fired on demonstrating theological students of Alazhar university today as they tried to march into the center of Cairo.

It was the fifth day of student demonstrations against Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha's government and its plan to sign a new Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

Sidky won a vote of confidence from the chamber of deputies last night. Reliable sources said he will negotiate with the British government concerning the time and place for signing the treaty draft he recently brought back from his London talks with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

Climax Near On Troop Inventory Proposals

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 27—The question of how much the Allies should tell each other about their fighting machinery headed for a climax today, with the United States insisting that it still must keep secret the size of its atomic bomb stockpile.

Russia was equally insistent that it can not disclose the strength of its home army unless the allies go whole hog and unveil, too, the total facts about all their armaments, including atomic and jet-propelled weapons.

The American delegation to the United Nations sought a quick vote on the half-dozen proposals which have sprung up in the UN assembly political committee as a result of (1) Russia's original proposal for a census of Allied armed forces abroad and (2) five days of verbal sparring between Russia, Britain and the United States.

American delegates reportedly were confident that the final decision of the committee would be to recommend a United Nations census of all allied armed forces and military-type organizations at home as well as abroad.

The British wanted to add a provision for verification of the individual nations' reports. Chances for acceptance of this were slim, for the United States was among the oppositors.

Russia, opposed at present to giving the full facts about its armaments, was among the oppositors.

MOST EVIDENCE AGAINST JAPS PRESENTED NOW

TOKYO, Nov. 27—The prosecution has completed the major part of its case against former premier Hideki Tojo and 26 other prominent Japanese accused of war crimes, Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Kennan said today.

The prosecution has traced Japan's aggression from the Mukden incident of 1931, which keynoted Japan's expansion on the continent of Asia, through the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Keenan said that this evidence will be supplemented by further evidence concerning the Japanese occupation of the Dutch East Indies, war crimes, and mistreatment of prisoners of war in other occupied areas.

The long trial that began last April 29 will then have to hear defense evidence before the Far East international military tribunal can render a verdict.

JAP MINERS GET CIGARS

TOKYO, Nov. 27—The U. S. Army decided today that what the Japanese miner needs to help him mine more coal is three yen (20 cents) worth of "surplus cigars." A total of 223,500 such cigars and about 100,000 ounces of Army surplus tobacco will be distributed among coal and other industrial workers as "produce more" bait, allied headquarters announced.

WEALTHY JAPS ARE ORDERED TO GIVE UP ASSETS

Allied Council Launches New Program To Dissolve All Japanese Monopolies

TOKYO, Nov. 27—Allied headquarters, in a smashing blow at Japanese monopolists, today ordered all assets of the 10 wealthiest businesses and families in the land converted into 10-year non-negotiable bonds and placed all their holdings and property under its jurisdiction.

Announcement of the order followed a discussion of the Zaibatsu at the allied four-power council meeting earlier today.

Maj. R. M. Cooper, Washington, D. C., chief of the liquidation branch of headquarters' anti-trust and cartels division, said that the order was part of "a broad program to dissolve monopolistic Japanese combines."

"For the first time, headquarters will be able to estimate the wealth that these 10 families actually have," he said.

The 10 families affected are the Aikawa, Asano, Furukawa, Iwasaki, Nitsui, Nakajima, Nomura, Okura, Sumitomo and Yasuda.

The directive transferred the Zaibatsu assets, including living expenses, all of which were hitherto controlled by the finance ministry, to the holding company liquidation commission.

Other Zaibatsu combines may be added to a later list and their assets frozen into government bonds, if it is determined they are "undesirable elements" in present-day Japanese life.

The term Zaibatsu is used to designate the Japanese families that personally directed and organized the huge trusts, holding companies and industries that financed and encouraged Japan's imperialist expansion.

At the allied council meeting, Lt. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, the Soviet delegate, had asked for a report on the progress of the dissolution of the Zaibatsu industrial empire.

Derevyanko suggested that Russia, China and Britain be permitted to attend sessions of the holding companies liquidation commission which headquarters established to dissolve financial and industrial combines. The Soviet delegate said thus the three nations would be able to satisfy (Continued on Page Two)

DEMOCRATS MAY TRY TO OUST LABORITE SOLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Rep. John E. Rankin, D. Miss., said today a block of southern Democrats may challenge the right of Rep. Vito Marcantonio, New York American laborite, to take his seat in the new congress.

Rankin's statement followed an announcement that agents of the house campaign investigating committee would be sent into Marcantonio's district to investigate the circumstances under which he was elected.

Chairman Percy Priest, D. Tenn., said the investigators would seek to determine whether there was coercion or intimidation of voters. This, he said, will include a study of whether the slaying of Joseph Scottoreggio, a Republican worker in Marcantonio's district, had any connection with the campaign.

In the senate, Republicans already have served notice that they will try to prevent Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, D. Miss., from taking his seat. This move is based on charges that Bilbo tried to prevent Negroes from voting in the Mississippi primary election and allegations that he accepted gratuities from Mississippi war contractors.

There will be no edition of The Circleville Herald Thursday as employees join in the observance of the Thanksgiving holiday.

City Store Lights Not Turned Off

Mayor Ben H. Gordon said Wednesday that municipal authorities had no authority to compel observance by Circleville stores and other downtown business establishments of the dim-out ordered by the Civilian Production Administration to conserve fuel-produced electricity.

Mayor Gordon pointed out, however, that individual violators of the CPA order face possible fines and even imprisonment. He said he understood that under the War Powers Act the federal government officials possess the power to compel observance of the dim-out decree.

The dim-out was scheduled to become effective Monday night but it was not observed in Circleville. Tuesday night very few stores and other businesses in downtown Circleville obeyed the command to extinguish window lights and electric signs.

A CPA official at Washington said that willful violation of the dim-out order is punishable by a fine of $10,000 maximum, or imprisonment for one year, or both.

Mayor Gordon said that if the dim-out order is enforced in Circleville the enforcement will have to be done by federal officers.

Mayors of both Columbus and Chillicothe have announced the municipal officials will not attempt to compel compliance with the dim-out order in those cities.

Mayor Gordon Wednesday received a letter from the Ohio public (Continued on Page Two)

HOUSING BOSS MAY QUIT JOB

Wyatt Said Ready To Resign Unless He Gets Backing Of President Truman

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Associates of Wilson W. Wyatt said today he may resign as housing expediter unless he gets solid backing from President Truman on his veterans housing program.

The showdown may come today at a scheduled White House conference between Wyatt and Mr. Truman.

Wyatt was hoping for strong presidential support. If he does not get it, his friends said privately, Wyatt probably will quit the government. He has a lucrative law practice awaiting him in Louisville, Ky.

On Mr. Truman's desk for a week has been a report from the housing chief urging sweeping new steps to produce low-priced homes for veterans under the newly freed economy.

The President asked for the report when he jinked price controls—including those on building materials—on Nov. 9. Wyatt hoped to get his reaction today.

Forestry service sources meanwhile warned that effects of the coal strike may be quickly felt in the housing program through curtailed lumber shipments.

Lumber stocks are on a "hand-to-mouth" basis, officials said, and any reduction in rail transportation (Continued on Page Two)

RUSSIA, WEST ARE SPLIT ON RACIAL PROBLEM

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 27—Russia and the western powers split today on a precedent-setting dispute over racial discrimination.

Andre Gromyko of the Soviet Union urged the United Nations to ask South Africa to halt alleged discrimination against its citizens of Indian descent.

The United States, Great Britain and a host of smaller nations wanted to ask the international court of justice to rule whether UN had a right to intervene. The question was whether South Africa's treatment of Indians was an international dispute or a domestic affair outside the scope of UN. The decision would affect UN's approach to discrimination in other countries.

Government Counsel Says Lewis Not Entitled To Regular Jury

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough today told John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers (AFL) that they made "a very great mistake" in shutting down the nation's mines before the court could rule on legal issues in the coal dispute.

The defense based its demand on the contention that Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had no right to issue the anti-strike order which Lewis and his United Mine Workers union (AFL) are ignoring.

The first defense argument was made by Joseph A. Padway, chief AFL counsel who flew here from Honolulu last night to join Lewis' legal fight against the government.

The defense tactics suggested prolonged legal skirmishing was in prospect because Lewis' trial on contempt charges got down to the business of picking an advisory jury for Goldsborough and presentation of testimony.

Padway asserted the defense contention that the government was prohibited by the Norris-LaGuardia act of 1932 from resorting to the injunctive process to break the coal strike.

The massive, heavy-browed boss of the United Mine Workers (AFL) went to court early, arriving at the building at 9:47 a. m. accompanied by Joseph A. Padway, chief AFL attorney who flew to Lewis' aid from Honolulu.

The contempt charges grew out of Lewis' refusal to obey a temporary order by Goldsborough directing him to withdraw the contract cancellation which kicked off the strike last Thursday.

Lewis took the same seat he held at Monday's hearing at which he was held for today's trial. He sat impassively in the second row of chairs facing the bench on the extreme left of the courtroom.

Goldsborough entered the courtroom at 9:55. The court immediately was called to order. Assistant (Continued on Page Two)

OLDEST KNOWN HUMAN REMAINS ARE REVEALED

LONDON, Nov. 27—Several layers of what can only be termed pre-historic villages—arranged like a multi-decker sandwich—have been discovered in British East Africa and are older than a couple of ice ages older than previously known human diggings.

Dr. L. S. B. Leakey was exploring ancient lake beds 42 miles northwest of Nairobi, in Kenya colony, when the discovery was made.

"My wife," Dr. Leakey wrote recently in the Times, "suddenly walked on to an area so thickly strewn with stone age handaxes and cleavers that one could scarcely walk over it without treading on them." That was in 1942.

By the next year a patient investigation had revealed a "whole series of camp floors of Acheulean man such as had never been found anywhere. A whole series of the camp sites, one above the other, were separated by beds of clay."

PHILLIPS MAY QUIT OSU

COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Tommy Phillips, Berea forward passing ace, will leave Ohio State for some other western conference school or for professional football, it was reported here today by a writer for Scripps-Howard newspapers. The story said that Phillips was disappointed in failure of Ohio State coaches to call on his passing ability except in the fading minutes of losing games this season.

CITY SCHOOLS GET MORE MONEY IF BILL PASSES

OEA Recommends Program To Increase Ohio School Funds $21,000,000

Circleville's public schools will receive $113,767 as compared with their present annual revenue of $64,586, it was announced Wednesday, in the event the Ohio legislature approves the state-aid program proposed by the Ohio Education Association.

That organization Wednesday recommended that the new legislature appropriate $153,000,000 to run the state's schools in 1947-48—an increase of about $21,000,000 per year.

The recommendation, to be submitted at the OEA convention here Dec. 26-28 for approval, would provide an average teachers' salary of $2,250 per year as compared with the present average of $2,010.

In announcing a two point proposal OEA assistant Secretary B. I. Griffith said the increased expenditure of public funds was necessary "to begin repair of the damage to Ohio's school system caused by the departure of teachers for better paying jobs."

Recommendations of the organization were:

1. Increase flat state support from $44 to an average of $58 per pupil.

2. Broaden the state foundation program to equalize educational facilities by raising the minimum supporting level from an average of $66.50 to $106. per pupil in average daily membership.

The program would also provide that schools receive a minimum tax levy of four mills as compared with the present three mill minimum required to receive additional aid under the foundation program.

OEA spokesmen said a significant feature of the recommendations was that flat state support would be based on enrollment rather than average daily attendance.

B. A. Stevens, association research director, pointed out that this method for distribution would be more equitable since schools must be equipped on the basis of total enrollment rather than average attendance.

He estimated that if the OEA recommendations were adopted Ohio—both state and local districts—would spend about $160,000,000 annually on educational institutions, with the state paying close to 50 per cent of the total cost.

Under the OEA plan between 80 and 90 additional school districts would receive minimum equalization aid. There are now 1,470 districts receiving the foundation help.

Stevens said only a comparatively few small one-room schools now receive less than four mills tax levy for educational purposes. Most of these are in Washington, Belmont and Monroe counties, he said.

"Effects of the proposed expansion of the equalization program would be far reaching," Stevens said. "An estimated 610,000 would receive equalization aid compared with only 250,000 at present."

"If put into effect, these proposals would go a long way toward reversing the downward trend in Ohio education and would once again make school teaching an attractive career for young men and women," he said.

Stevens said adoption of the OEA program would "still place Ohio far behind the recently adopted education programs of Michigan and California."

A Lesson In Conservation

We were sitting on Bill Webster's porch the other night, chatting over a glass of beer—when the talk turned to forest preservation, soil erosion, and other things that affect a farming community.

Judge Cunningham speaks up: "It's all right to worry about conserving our natural resources," he says, "but there's a far bigger problem when it comes to conservation—and that's preserving our democratic way of life, our sense of personal freedom, our respect for one another's rights."

From where I sit, the Judge is right. All America's great resources, our abundant natural wealth, are lost the minute we lose the right to work them as free people in a free land!

Whenever you see or hear of an encroachment on our rights—whether it's the right to free speech, or the right to vote as we see fit, or the right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer in licensed, law-abiding places... watch out!

JAYCEES PLAN SAFETY PROJECT

Members Agree To Sponsor Project Each Month At Meeting

During a lengthy discussion it was definitely decided that the Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce is very much alive and that the organization is not by any means dead.

The discussion waxed fast and furious at the monthly session held Tuesday night in Hanley's Tea Room. The 20 members present eventually agreed that the Junior Chamber is a long way from being extinct.

Members who fail to regularly attend the monthly meetings were rather severely criticized but no definite action was taken along this line.

One of the questions under discussion was whether the group should concentrate its energy on one big project monthly or annually and it was agreed to focus the organization's efforts on one project each month.

The project for the ensuing month is aimed at school safety in Circleville and the committee directing it is headed by Frank Wantz as chairman with the backing of the entire membership. Paul Warden is chairman of publicity.

Following adjournment the Jaycees proceeded in a body to Memorial hall where all pitched in and helped to decorate the auditorium in preparation for the Jaycees Thanksgiving dance which will be held from 10 p. m. Wednesday to 1 a. m. Thursday.

ILLINOI MADE FEW MISTAKES IN BIG NINE PLAY

Final Statistics Show That Michigan Led League In Offense And Defense

By Tommy Devine

United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, Nov. 27 — It is a football axiom that the team which makes the fewest mistakes wins and Illinois' Western Conference champions today were willing to vouch for that fact.

The final official Big Nine statistics show the title-winning Illinois finishing fourth both offensively and defensively. But whereas Coach Ray Eliot's combination trailed in those departments the figures reveal it committed few blunders that opened the scoring gates for its rivals.

Illinois won two key games — from Michigan and Ohio State — on pass interceptions with which Sam Zatkoff and Julie Rykovich raced 63 and 98 yards respectively. Yet in seven conference contests Illinois had only three out of 71 aerials intercepted.

The Illinois passing game was not particularly effective with its completion average of .309, out-ranking only Wisconsin's aerial game, but Eliot's proteges seldom threw the ball where a rival could snare it.

Illinois likewise demonstrated sure and clever ball handling and lost the ball on fumbles only nine times in seven league battles.

The bulk of team statistical honors were grabbed by Michigan. The Wolverines led in the two most important departments, offense and defense, and also set the pace in six other classifications.

The Wolverines averaged 340.9 yards per game to top the offense and limited their opponents to an average net gain of 136.3 yards per contest to lead that bracket.

Michigan's other top honors came in points scored with an average of 23.6 per game; in opponent points, with 6.6 per game; in yards gained by passing with 145.5; in opponents yards gained by rushing with 117 per game; in average yardage on interceptions with 42.3 per contest; and in permitting opponents to complete only .305 per cent of their passes.

A Michigan star, Halfback Bob Chappuis grabbed the major individual honors by setting a new total offensive record of 1039 yards. The old mark was 562 yards established by Otto Graham of Northwestern in 1942.

Chappuis also set a new pass completion record when he clicked on 36 out of 64 attempts for a mark of .563. The old record was .544, set by Dick Good of Illinois in 1940.

Chappuis' total offensive mark was almost double that of his closest rival.
Ben Raimondi of Indiana led in pass completions with 48 out of 80 attempts for a net of 598 yards. Bob De Moss of Purdue was next with 45 completions in 94 tries.

Art Dufelmeier of Illinois led in ball carrying effectiveness with an average of eight yards per try on 38 attempts. Vic Schwall of Northwestern was the leading scorer with 40 points; Lou Mihajlovich of Indiana topped the pass receivers with 16 catches; and Johnny Calvin of Purdue paced the punters with an average of 43 yards per kick.

UCLA MENTOR IS UNITED PRESS COACH OF WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—His boys had plenty of kicks coming and they made them both on and off the field.

He instructed them to "kick, kick, and kick some more" and when they got into the dressing room at half time they kicked about having to kick so much.

But he was firm, this likeable guy who coached only high school players until last season. The boys went out and kicked some more and the strategy paid off with a victory that put them in the Rose Bowl.

He's the United Press coach of the week, Bert Labrucherie of the unbeaten and untied University of California at Los Angeles Bruins, who beat their home-town rivals

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

Troop 8

The meeting was called to order. The promise was given. The roll was called and the minutes were read.

Mrs. Brehmer gave the names of some girls from other countries who have asked to correspond with American Girl Scouts. Members discussed adopting a family in Belgium or Holland to send Christmas gifts to.

Ann Curtin announced that the Senior Scout Troop always furnished the Christmas tree at headquarters, so this year Troop 8 will be responsible for it.

Mrs. Brehmer asked us if we would be interested in inviting people who have careers like nursing, etc., to speak to us about the educational, health, etc. requirements for our chosen careers. Mrs. Brehmer said she would ask at Berger hospital if they could use three or four Girl Scouts as nurses aides, after school and on Saturdays and Sundays.

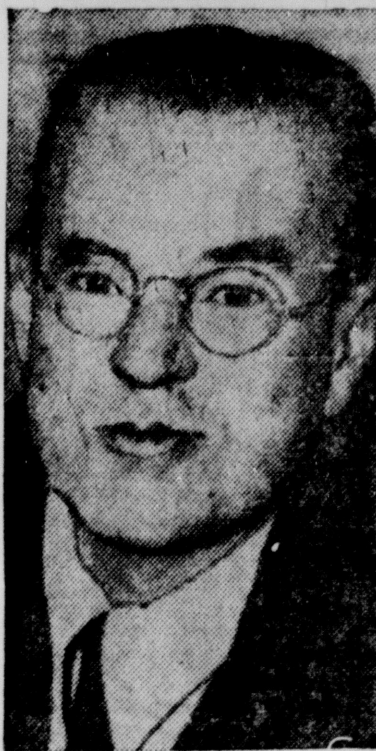

Mrs. Stout suggested that we do a pantomime for the Christmas program on an old Bohemian legend. The Christmas program is to be held at the Episcopal church. The troop decided to do the pantomime.

If the program committee decides to have refreshments for the Christmas party Troop 8 will be responsible for the decorations and table center-pieces.

The meeting was closed with a friendship circle and "taps."

Scribe, Elayne Baker.

Missing Since '42

A BOSTON cab driver, above, stepped into a police station asking aid in patching a memory that went dead in 1942 and within four hours was identified as Phillip B. Skerrye, 47, Harvard graduate and instructor in a half-dozen New England preparatory schools. Apparently missing since he taught at Tilton academy in 1937, Skerrye's memory was probably partially restored when he was struck by a car the night before he reported at the police station. He told police the first thing he remembers since 1942 was being picked up by someone on the street after being struck in Boston. (International)

CORN LOAN RATE OF $1.20 SET FOR PICKAWAY

Government corn loans will be available to Pickaway county farmers at a rate of $1.20 per bushel. John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway County Agricultural Conservation committee announced today.

"The nation's corn supply almost equals that of 1942, but there is considerably less livestock on farms now than in 1942," Mr. Boggs said. "Should the large corn supply push prices down too far, the corn loan will be the farmer's protection. With a corn loan, each Pickaway county farmer can be sure of at least $1.20 a bushel for his crop."

The basic operation of the corn loan program will be the same as in recent years. Every individual who either produced corn or has a share in corn produced this year, is eligible for a corn loan.

"The 1947 corn loan program offers price support for a longer period of time than past corn loan programs," Mr. Boggs added. "Government loans on 1946 corn will be available through next July, whereas last year loans were available only through May."

Loans will be available on ear corn from December 1, 1946, through July 31, 1947, and on shelled corn from June 1 through July 31, 1947.

CAESARISM

IT is probably no exaggeration to say that John L. Lewis is the sort of man of whom Caesars are made. Given an opportunity in a world grown careless, and "clothed in a little brief authority", such a man might go farther than merely "strutting his little hour upon the stage." In many a country, ancient or modern, such a reckless and ambitious adventurer has broken through the controls which normal civilization establishes, and has destroyed a free nation.

It is unnecessary to assume that we Americans are on the verge of destruction. Our government is the oldest and steadiest in the world. But even so, it might be so shaken by an unexpected onslaught from within that it would never be the same again. If the great Roman Empire, perhaps the nearest approach in history to our own system, could fall to slow ruin when weakened by carelessness and disregard of established practices and principles, our own way of life might some day disappear almost with the suddenness of an atomic bomb.

Never has it been so necessary as now for nations to face facts, to know what is going on in the world, to preserve the good and avoid the evil.

BEGINNING AT HOME

IN a fusty tiny volume published by Appleton's in 1883 and titled "Don't", under "advice to womankind appear these words:

"Don't wear at home spotted or faded gowns, or anything that is not neat and appropriate. Appear at the breakfast table fresh, cool and delicious, like a newly-plucked flower. Dress for the pleasure and admiration of your family."

Perhaps the harassed mother of a lively young brood will find it a bit difficult to "appear like a newly plucked flower" between getting father off with coffee and toast inside him on the 8:15, and milk and cereal into his small son and daughter. But she can try. And anyway it's good to be reminded, good for men as well as women, that not only in dress but in a lot of other matters aiming at "the pleasure and admiration of one's family" is just about the most important job anybody can have. If the family is working on a harmonious plane, other things pretty much take care of themselves. A world full of well-run families would be a mighty nice place. And there wouldn't be nearly so many problems about.

As for coalition, a lot of people are getting worried about this winter's coal. Where's John L. Lewis?

They say time and tide wait for no man, but gosh, how men wait for women!

Pages From the Diary of An

Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a gloomy morning, the house dank, my blood pressure high and my mind full of wonder as to how much longer I will be able to get away with refusal to start the day by bowing toward the homestead of John L. Lewis. Not long, I expect, if some informer turns me in at Washington. It is extremely difficult for me to appreciate that all Americans except the hordes of John L. are responsible for the coal strike and the critical situation that faces our America. We must be guilty, for one of the alphabetical rat-traps says so. The Civilian Production Administration has announced that violators of "brown out" orders may be punished by a fine up to $10,000 and a year in prison. Also discontinuance of service can be invoked.

While John Q. Public is being kicked in the teeth and made to appear as a patriotic citizen only because of dire threats, John L. Lewis and his miners are patted on the back, cajoled and encouraged. No one is fooled by the hubbub in Washington. Everyone knows that the miners will get just what they want. The only conjecture is as to how long the strike will be permitted to continue before the so-called government gives in. Why not give it to Lewis right now instead of landing another devastating blow on reconversion? And then give it to Lewis and other labor leaders of his stripe when the new congress meets. We are expecting things out of that new congress. And if the politicians know what is good for their political futures they will see that we get what we expect. It is high time for Washington to be giving some consideration to the general public rather than exclusively to the organized minorities.

The scrivener is no opponent of organized labor, but he does stand opposed to organized labor heading down the road that leads to destruction of institutions that are solely American and which have made this a land worth fighting for.

So, under penalty of law you are forced to conserve fuel at

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—The dictionary is taking one of its worst beatings in years from the typewriters of music men and other observers seeking to record their appreciation of the Joe Mooney quartet. Webster didn't include enough superlatives.

Mooney, the boss and accordion and piano player of the group, has been hailed as a musical genius both as arranger and performer. Those who know claim that he does things with his left hand at the piano that are out of this world. They are only slightly less lyrical about Andy Fitzgerald, clarinetist; Jack Hotop, guitarist, and Gate Frega, bass. Gate's name, by the way, has no connection with the swing language word; he was christened Gaetan.

But for anyone who isn't an expert at picking out individual excellence, but simply knows what he likes, the main thing is the ensemble effect. And, brother, that's good. If you close your eyes, you could swear at times that there are 24 and not four men playing. This impression isn't created by noise volume either. Mooney never causes eardrum fatigue.

Joe doesn't want his stuff classified as 'sweet' or 'swing' or whatever the latest word may be. "We just play music," he says. With a lot of hot bands you get plenty of improvisation and no idea of what the basic melody is. Mooney and his men can improvise with the best of them, but you always know what the tune is.

The Mooney bandwagon began to load up last Summer while they were playing at a Paterson, N. J., joint. Trade magazine writers went off their rockers about the combination. Then the boys moved into town to Dixon's on West 52nd St., which these days is only a shadow of the "swing street" of a few years ago, and the big parade began. They're still there. They are on the network Monday nights at 10:15 p. m., with Paul Whiteman himself doing the announcing as musical director. They have guested on many other programs and will have their first records issued in January by Decca.

Mooney, of course, is no Topsy. He's been around developing for years. He was playing piano for radio programs when in his teens, was a staff arranger for station WLW in Cincinnati in the early 30's, learned the accordion to win a bet that the instrument could be made to "swing," played accordion with Whiteman's band and off and on has arranged for the biggest band leaders in the business. He started a small unit in 1942 and a year later was in an auto accident that laid him up for two years. He began organizing his present group last year. Mooney, Fitzgerald and Frega are all Paterson boys.

I must add that Joe also does vocals, and does them as well as he does his other chores. As far as he is concerned, life has begun at 35.

As we start whittling down our war debt, many of us wonder whether Uncle Sam or the home mortgage should come first.

The time seems to be approaching when a lot of well-meaning people start getting sentimental again about the Germans.

Diagnosing Rheumatic Fever

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

Rheumatic fever has been called Juvenile Enemy No. 1 and rightly so, for this treacherous disease not only accounts for 95 per cent of heart trouble among children but is also the chief cause of death and disability in young adults.

Occurring most often in children from five to eight years of age, it has a habit of coming back time after time, causing more heart damage with each recurrence. Thus, it is important that this dread disease, which so often hides behind what appears to be no more than a severe cold, be diagnosed at its first appearance so that measures to prevent its return can be instituted at once. Fortunately, doctors have two aids to accurate diagnosis—X-ray and what is known as a blood sedimentation test.

Exact Cause Unknown

Although the exact cause of rheumatic fever is not known, it would appear that poor housing, dampness and improper living conditions in general contribute to its development. Rheumatic fever often develops following a sore throat or tonsillitis. The first symptoms may be pain or soreness in the joints about a week after the throat trouble has cleared up. Other symptoms of the disorder are fever, paleness of the skin, failure to gain weight, and rapid beating of the heart.

Of course, whenever there is any suspicion that the disease is present, a physician should be called in at once so that a diagnosis can be made. Parents should not ignore joint pains when they occur in a child and think of them as "growing pains" because growth does not cause pain in the joints. These mild joint pains often may be the first sign of rheumatic fever. Often the first symptom is just plain tiredness.

No Specific Cure

Unfortunately, at present there is no specific cure for rheumatic fever. It would appear that the best treatment available is long continued rest in bed. Preparations known as the salicylates are useful in relieving the symptoms to some extent. Often it is necessary to keep a child in bed for a period of three to four months or even longer. It has been thought, too, that giving one of the sulfonamide drugs regularly to children who have had an attack of rheumatic fever may be helpful in warding off attacks of sore throat and tonsillitis and thus preventing recurrent attacks.

A great deal of research is being carried out in order to determine the exact cause of rheumatic fever so that a more specific type of treatment may be found. Until that date comes, a child's best defense against this heart-crippler must remain in watchful parents—parents, who see to it that he gets the right foods for good nourishment; parents who are well enough informed to know when to suspect that it may be present; parents who are careful enough to call the doctor immediately when they have observed anything that might point to rheumatic fever.

BLOCK THAT THIRTEENER
"BLOCK THAT KICK!" is now being heard throughout the land of the pigskin as the waning football season attains its climax. But that exclamation, and the companion "Hold that line!" have nothing on the No Trump injunction to "Block that suit!" It is especially timely when one of the declarer's two holdings contains an established thirteener of a suit, together with a doubtful chance for an entry to score it.

The defense's job then is to see that the declarer gets blocked from a chance to use that insignificant but crucial trick-taker.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

NOW the ticking of the watch on her arm seemed to grow louder and louder.

Raphael opened the door of the apartment, took the small bag from her and bowed gallantly over her hand.

"Leedya... how nice! Come in... It is always wonderful to see you. But such an unattractive place to come to! No pictures on the wall and bare windows. The rooms are denuded and ugly. But only a few more hours and we go home."

Lydia's heart was a hammer beating fast. Though tense and excited, Raphael did not seem surprised to see her. Hadn't he and Theo thought it odd that Kirby was not here when they had come this morning? Raphael spoke of bare walls and windows from which the pictures and draperies had been taken, but he did not say that Kirby was not here. With all personal things removed, the living room looked as impersonal as a hotel room.

I stand here and think these things while Chris is in court... He's there now! After more than three years he has gone into a courtroom on his cane... and I am not there...

When Raphael sat opposite her she asked, "Is Theo here?"

"Oh, yes, yes, of course he is here. And in a few minutes I go. I go to leave you and Theo alone. I shall take a walk and look at New York for the last time. Theo, my poor darling... But she is very brave. She is such a little person to be so brave. Do you know I have never seen her cry? She is quite perfect."

"Were you expecting me?" Lydia asked.

He smiled. "Yes, but eat is not—how you say—my business? That is why I take a walk and you see Theo alone—yes?"

"You know, Raphael. But how do you know?"

He laughed. "What you weel talk to Theo about? Me, I know nuzzing. These family matters, I am no good at them. Besides, this is my happy day. I cannot be sad even for Kirby on this day. Forgive me. But I am going home today. Theo is my wife. To me she is not anybody's mother. So I do not know how she feels. So please, do not ask me any questions." He laughed again and shrugged. "I talk and talk to take up the time until Theo comes out of her room to see you."

"I haven't much time," Lydia said. "That is what all of you Americans say. You all say you have no time. You go on saying it until truly you do not have any more time. Puff! The time is out and you have not done any of the things you were going to do when you had the time. It's absurd—yes?"

"Yes, she told me Chris told me he was dead and I told Kirby."

"I'm free," Theo said. "As long as he was on the same earth with me I was afraid of him. Have you

"It is absurd but—but how did you know that Kirby had run away and married Wade?"

He shook a reproachful finger at her and laughed at her.

"See—there you go asking me questions again. Kirby is a darling. She is pure Americana. I tell Theo that many times. Kirby is pure Americana. We have had much fun and good laughs. She was more than make men laugh. Men more than women. And men want to laugh. I have seen women who had nothing except a gift of laughter be much loved. Kirby is a peasant girl who glories in being a peasant girl. You think I talk nonsense while you have not much time? It is not nonsense to say that Kirby is lucky to have found her niche so young."

Questions were pyramiding in her mind when Theo came in the room. She wore a beautifully fitting suit the color of ripe tomatoes.

Raphael sprang to his feet and went to her and kissed her cheek. "I go now, darling," he said. "I tell Leedya a selfish, rude. She has not much time. Shall I get you something?"

"No, darling, nothing. Everything is packed, isn't it? You have our tickets?"

"Here in my pocket." He laughed. "Close to my heart as you are."

Theo said nothing until he left. Then she went to the fireplace and leaned against it.

"If I could cry, Lydia. If I only could cry."

"Kirby doesn't want you to cry over her. She's very happy."

Theo shook her beautiful head. "I don't want to cry over Kirby. I want to cry for shame that I have been such a selfish woman and such a poor mother."

"I'm a little bewildered by all this. How did you know?"

Theo's china-blue eyes had the look of a sad child.

"Chris came shortly after we came home and I was wondering where Kirby was. I thought nothing of it when she didn't write. I thought perhaps she'd spent last night with Alan's nurse or even with you. Chris had to come in town early this morning, he said, and he wanted to spare you the telling of bad news."

"It isn't bad news, Theo." Theo's trembling violated her composure. The blue veins in her frail hands were large and taut.

"I can't cry," she said. "Andrew detested a weeping woman. You can deny tears so long that they dry up at the source. And Andrew is dead. I read it in the Boston paper. He's dead. Did you know it? Did you know about him? Did Kirby ever tell you about Andrew Cordray?"

"Yes, she told me Chris told me he was dead and I told Kirby."

"I'm free," Theo said. "As long as he was on the same earth with me I was afraid of him. Have you any idea what it means to live with a man you're afraid of, to let a man you're afraid of make love to you? Love... He profaned the word. Raphael isn't here. I can talk... My tears would not be for Kirby, Lydia. They would be for me. When you remove fear, it's like letting the blind see... I was young and healthy but I would not leave Andrew because I liked the luxuries he gave me. I warped my daughter's young life because I liked Mrs. Andrew Cordray on my calling card and the power that went with the name. I liked the beautiful clothes and jewels and the lovely rooms and people bowing to the little New England girl. I liked all of that and I let Andrew profane everything I had been brought up to believe in to have it."

"Even if Kirby knew that, she has always loved you and defended you."

"Of course she knew. She has always known. Her mind penetrates more than the surface. Because she knew me so well that's why, I think, for such a long time when she was growing up she didn't care how she looked. Ugliness was better than a parasitic beauty. At least her ugliness was honest and her mother behind her face was not."

"Is that why she likes plain and simple things and wants to be a plain and simple person herself?"

Theo said, "A woman who has beauty too often lets that and that alone speak for her. I have my face and I need no more for myself," she thinks. "My face is enough. Everything I want will come to me because of this face I was lucky to have been born with."

"Lucky? Hear me out, Lydia. When you go and Raphael comes back, I shall lock this part of myself and throw the key away forever. If I could have one wish it would be to begin all over again and with a plain face. Then I should have to develop myself and a man would love me for myself, for what I really am inside me. A woman with a face like mine is loved only for her face. No man has ever really loved me, but two men have loved Kirby. I am forty and what I have will go. But what Kirby has inside her—a kind of light that made Alan and Wade forget that her mouth is thick—will get better as time goes on. Beauty is transient, but character is permanent. Do you know why I love Raphael so much?"

"No, Theo. No, I don't."

"I love him for his lightness, the lightness of his touch, his step, his thoughts. Everything in my life has been so heavy. For all my apparent lightness I have always felt weighed down as if by stones. For years I have felt like that, the first years with my first husband who was stolid and undemonstrative and those years in torment with Andrew."

MUSICAL NOTES AND NOISES

What's Symphonic to Some Is Sour to the Writer

By KENNETH F. HEWINS
Written for Central Press and This Newspaper

BACK IN 1897, according to literature, a fellow by the name of William Congreve wrote a play, "The Mourning Bride," and in Act I, Scene I this quotation appeared: "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak."

While literature thought well enough of that gem of wisdom to preserve it through the years, I cannot accept the declaration without reservations.

Music may soothe the savage breast—like the man said—but it depends pretty largely upon the kind of music and the nature of the brute that is to be soothed. There are some people who like—or pretend to like—only the so-called long-hair variety of music. I think these people have a perfect right to remain on earth. I am all for them. I suppose I should envy them. They are valued components of society and they are so easily pleased in their musical desires.

The kind of music they seem to swoon to is, to the rest of us, a combination of discordant sounds. I would use the word "cacophony" at this point, but there is no need for both of us to run to the dictionary.

Then, on the other side of the tracks, there are some people who think of music as Webster did, that it is "melody or harmony; any succession of tones so modulated as to please the ear."

There are, of course, several varieties of ears: pink ears, long ears, cauliflower ears, etc.—which keeps

Webster in the clear. But what I think he meant to do was to define music as something one can pat his foot to.

As I say, I have no bone to pick with the high-brow clientele who roll in the aisles when some fugitive from a barber shop strikes up 15-minute concertos all through the night. It is their own business to like it, if they can; and I hope business booms for them as well as their skilled entertainers.

While I give the classical music lovers every quarter to exercise their love, I wish they would extend the same courtesy to those of us who prefer melody makers to music makers.

Recently, I have voluntarily subjected myself to a culturizing process to improve my social standing. I have been going to swanky concerts, hearing such masters and mistresses as Albert Spalding, Alec Templeton, Helen Jepson and the like.

All of them played or sang mostly the type of tuneless stuff which Mark Twain would have described as being "better than it sounded."

A fellow newsman, who attended one of the concerts, undertook to report a layman's view of the proceedings, using only his constitutional rights for a background. The scribe had the audacity to state that "the first part of the program consisted of a series of 'heavy' numbers that had a definite wearying effect upon the audience."

A woman reader of the paper objected to the principle of freedom of the press and would have ridden the daring newsman out of musical desires.

When I saw and heard Helen Jepson, for instance, I kept still about her singing. Impressed with her striking charm, poise, dress and personality, I did feel competent to say that this Metropolitan opera star and mother of two children is, to me, America's singing Mother Hubba Hubba. I think her singing had to be good to get what she got, incidentally.

When one goes to a high-falutin' concert, he is presented with a printed menu foretelling what is about to happen. The only word on one of these programs that I could understand was the word "Intermission"; and I regret to admit that I even missed that.

When I thought intermission was there, I arose—along with plenty of company—and withdrew from the auditorium. Actually, it was not intermission at all. The artist had merely stepped off stage for a brief interlude to rosin up his bow.

In almost every concert performance that I have been attending in my self-provoked educational undertaking, I have been comforted by observing that there were people there who cannot even determine when the performer has reached the end of his piece. Just let the musician turn a page too slowly and some bird will think the number is over and will solo a few claps, to his embarrassment.

The long-hair adherents say, more firmly than kindly, that I will learn to like their brand if I hear enough of it. They know that

I will learn to like stuff I have never been able to enjoy for more than 40 years.

Frankly, I am getting rather discouraged. I am also getting older, with each passing concert. I cannot wait forever to learn to like what I do not like.

By the same token, I am not going to plant a few acres of acorns at my age and wait for a national forest to spring therefrom.

I must have more speed with my culture, if any.

For some time, the manufacturers of pocketbooks have been trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. I have never seen much advantage, after all, in trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear; and I imagine most sows, at least, will join me in this conclusion.

Nevertheless, I have been trying to take a liking to the better things of life. I have been trying hard to like music that isn't, by my untrained ears.

At the dinner table the other day, I was making some off-the-record comments about some of the concerts which still are so foreign to my desires. Our No. 1 daughter suddenly let me know that she liked "that kind of music."

"Marilyn, you must not say things that are not true."

"But I really do," she answered. "I am in the glee club, you know."

And then our No. 2 daughter said: "I like that high-class music, myself."

And I said: "Pass the beans, please. At least I can eat."

Wife Preservers

The very best way to remove soil streaks on seams of underwear and girdles, and the inside of neckbands and collars, is to dampen the fabric and rub soap directly on the soiled places, allowing it to remain awhile before putting into the tub or washer. For especially stubborn soil, gentle rubbing with a brush is easier on the fabric than a washboard. And remember, that not allowing articles to get too soiled—in other words, frequent washings—will prevent dirt from becoming too deeply imbedded in the fibers.

Public Urged To Mail Christmas Cards and Packages Early

HEAVIEST MAIL IN HISTORY IS DUE THIS YEAR

Postmaster Hays Issues Plea To Wrap Packages Well And Mail At Once

An appeal for the immediate mailing of Christmas packages and cards was voiced Wednesday by Postmaster A. Hulse Hays.

Declaring that the heaviest holiday mailing in history is anticipated the postmaster said the Circleville postoffice will likely be swamped by the rush of Yuletide parcels.

"If the coal strike continues and results in increasing shortages of fuel," Postmaster Hays asserted, "it is very possible that the Postoffice Department in Washington will eventually place an embargo on all parcel mailing."

He said that it is therefore highly important that persons desiring to mail gifts and cards to relatives and friends prepare and mail them at once. The postmaster pointed out that only in this way can the senders be certain the gifts will reach relatives and friends by Dec. 25.

If such an embargo is invoked it will also prevent the moving of express packages also.

Early mailing of packages can do no harm and may insure delivery in the event of an embargo the postmaster said. He pointed out that senders may mark the packages "Do Not Open Until Christmas."

The Postoffice Department in Washington several days ago predicted "mountains of mail" this Yuletide season throughout the nation and urged early mailing of Christmas gift packages and greeting cards.

The department suggested all local packages and letters be mailed not later than Dec. 15 and that parcels destined for distant places should be mailed not later than Dec. 1.

However, the fuel situation has altered the situation and the public is now being asked to prepare and mail cards and packages immediately, Postmaster Hays said.

To facilitate handling and delivery of holiday mail the postmaster urged the following precautions:

1—Wrap parcels carefully and register or insure valuables.
2—Address packages completely and the sender should put his or her address in the upper left-hand corner.

3—If the sender thinks his or her friends may have moved, send cards by first-class mail. This will insure delivery.

4—Use air mail for distant points.

The Christmas season is always a headache for postal employees, it was declared, and this year with the expected avalanche of gift and card mailings coupled with the ever-present threat of crippled transportation facilities and a possible parcel embargo resulting from the coal strike and fuel shortage, the job of the mail clerk and mail carrier will likely be worse than a headache.

More Strikes Threaten With 500,000 Idle

MEAT PACKERS MAY WALK OUT FOR MORE MONEY

Steel Industry Closes More Plants As Coal Miners Remain At Home

By United Press

Strikes—exclusive of the coal miners' walkout—curtailed type-writer manufacturing in Connecticut and shrimp fishing in Florida and stopped public schooling in two midwestern communities today.

Negotiators were seeking to avert other strikes which if called, would put radio stars off the air and halt meat production throughout the nation.

Altogether, an estimated 500,000 workers were idled by labor disputes but the coal strike, spreading its effects over the nation's economy, accounted for all but a fraction of this number. Forty thousand workers were idled in the steel industry, in addition to the 400,000 striking United Mine Workers. They were reported laid off because coal supplies were insufficient to keep blast furnaces and open hearths burning.

Other labor developments included:

1—The Los Angeles evening Herald Express, largest newspaper west of Chicago, settled all its labor disputes, signed a two year contract with the CIO American Newspaper Guild and announced that publication would resume Monday. The newspaper had shutdown operations Sept. 4.

2—Fear of picketline violence subsided at the Allis-Chalmers farm equipment plant in suburban Milwaukee, strikebound for 212 days, as strikers announced that picketing would continue on a diminished scale until Monday.

At Hartford, Conn., some union employees of the Royal Typewriter company, struck for a 10 cents an hour wage increase.

In Florida two thirds of the shrimp fleet remained idle awaiting arrival of a federal labor conciliator to mediate an unofficial strike. Sixty boats were reported tied up, as fishermen sought to gain a 16 cents a pound increase in the price of shrimp.

The AFL teachers strike which has shutdown classes for 30,000 public high school and grade school pupils at St. Paul moved into its third day. In Iowa 91 pupils of four rural schools near Fort Dodge also enjoyed the third day of an unexpected vacation, as their five teachers remained on strike. Wages are the major issue in all of the teachers' strikes.

NAVY WILL TRY TO FLY LARGE PLANES AT POLE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—The Navy hoped today to make aviation history by flying normally land-based transport planes from the deck of an aircraft carrier during Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd's forthcoming antarctic expedition.

Such planes never have been borne aloft from a carrier, although B-25 medium bombers took off from the carrier Hornet in the 1942 raid on Tokyo.

The planes to be used in the unprecedented experiment are twin-engine transports the size of a commercial airliner and are known commercially as DC-3's, the Navy said.

Spy Hunt Is Expected In U. S. Soon

By Lyle C. Wilson
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Government plans to investigate Communist activities in the United States were headed almost inevitably today toward a spy hunt. The record of Communist activity in the western hemisphere shows two distinct methods of operation.

1. Bold public support of Russian foreign policies through avowedly Communist organizations and the more numerous and more effective Communist fronts.

2. Espionage conducted necessarily in secret through Russian and native citizens.

The government is approaching the problem raised by such activities from two directions. President Truman has named a presidential commission to report by Feb. 1 on existing safeguards against disloyalty and subversive activities within government departments.

The house committee on un-American activities has announced that after the new Republican congress meets, it will undertake to expose Communists and their sympathizers within the government. The committee intends, also, to extend its investigation generally through the country, with special attention to the charge that Hollywood is crawling with fellow travelers.

Mr. Truman's commission and the house committee could well prepare for their job by learning about the Communist espionage which has been going on in Canada. The dominion government has published a 733-page volume on the subject in the form of a royal commission report.

PRO-RED SPEECH IS DISCLOSED

Magazine Newsweek Quotes Elliott Roosevelt Talk Backing Russia

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The magazine Newsweek quoted "a reliable individual" today as saying that Elliott Roosevelt had made a pro-Russian speech at a Moscow reception given by a member of the American embassy staff.

The reception, Newsweek said, was in honor of the Russian chief of the American division of the all-union society for cultural relations with foreign countries.

The magazine said its informant was present at the reception and it quoted him as follows:

"Elliott started off by explaining that foreign correspondents have no more freedom in the United States than they have in Russia. Take, for instance, he said, the case of Ilya Ehrenburg. Throughout his recent stay in America the noted Soviet writer was followed by a state department agent. Moreover, he rightly refused to be registered as a foreign agent. The United States cannot expect the Russians to agree to an exchange of students and writers until the foreign agents registration act is repealed, said Elliott.

EGYPTIAN POLICE SHOOT AT STUDENTS AT CAIRO

CAIRO, Nov. 27—Egyptian police fired on demonstrating theological students of Al-Azhar university today as they tried to march into the center of Cairo.

It was the fifth day of student demonstrations against Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha's government and its plan to sign a new Anglo-Egyptian treaty.

Sidky won a vote of confidence from the chamber of deputies last night. Reliable sources said he will negotiate with the British government concerning the time and place for signing the treaty draft he recently brought back from his London talks with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin.

FIRST AND SECOND GRADERS are shown in a Denver, Colo., parochial school getting their assignments for the week in a cold classroom. The fuel shortage forced Denver schools to close but parochial school students were asked to report for assignments.

Climax Near On Troop Inventory Proposals

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 27—The question of how much the Allies should tell each other about their fighting machinery headed for a climax today, with the United States insisting that it still must keep secret the size of its atomic bomb stockpile.

Russia was equally insistent that it can not disclose the strength of its home army unless the allies go whole hog and unveil, too, the total facts about all their armaments, including atomic and jet-propelled weapons.

The American delegation to the United Nations sought a quick vote on the half-dozen proposals which have sprung up in the UN assembly political committee as a result of (1) Russia's original proposal for a census of Allied armed forces abroad and (2) five days of verbal sparring between Russia, Britain and the United States.

American delegates reportedly were confident that the final decision of the committee would be to recommend a United Nations census of all allied armed forces and military-type organizations at home as well as abroad.

The British wanted to add a provision for verification of the individual nations' reports. Chances for acceptance of this were slim, for the United States was among the opposition.

Russia, opposed at present to giving the full facts about its

MOST EVIDENCE AGAINST JAPS PRESENTED NOW

TOKYO, Nov. 27—The prosecution has completed the major part of its case against former premier Hideki Tojo and 26 other prominent Japanese accused of war crimes, Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan said today.

The prosecution has traced Japanese aggression from the Mukden incident of 1931, which keyed Japan's expansion on the continent of Asia, through the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Keenan said that this evidence will be supplemented by further evidence concerning the Japanese occupation of the Dutch East Indies, war crimes, and mistreatment of prisoners of war in other occupied areas.

The long trial that began last April 29 will then have to hear defense evidence before the Far East international military tribunal can render a verdict.

JAP MINERS GET CIGARS

TOKYO, Nov. 27—The U. S. Army decided today that what the Japanese miner needs to help him mine more coal is three yen (20 cents) worth of "surplus cigars." A total of 223,500 such cigars and about 100,000 ounces of Army surplus tobacco will be distributed among coal and other industrial work as "produce more" bait, allied headquarters announced.

BIG FOUR IN SECRET SESSION

Foreign Ministers Exclude Closest Advisors At Hush-Hush Meeting

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The big four foreign ministers scheduled another very private meeting today in the seclusion of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' hotel suite and again barred all their advisors.

Even Byrnes' trusted senatorial advisors, Tom Connally, D. Tex., and Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich., were excluded.

A news blackout on the big four meeting indicated that the foreign ministers, after months of wrangling and debating in public, were attempting to strike a bargain in private and prevent their New York meeting from ending in failure.

Whatever "horse-trading" takes place at the new super-private meetings will involve a date for withdrawal of American, British and Yugoslav troops from the area which is to become the free territory of Trieste.

Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov is determined that the big four shall set a definite and early date for evacuation.

Byrnes and British Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin are just as determined to leave the date indefinite.

Molotov on the one side and Byrnes and Bevin on the other—but for different reasons—remember the trouble last Spring when the Soviet Union failed to get its troops out of Iran by the agreed-upon date of March 2. Molotov would like to place the western powers in such a position now, while Byrnes and Bevin are just as determined to avoid a commitment which when the time comes they might not want to keep.

The dinner was held in the oak-paneled state dining room, closed to state functions since 1939 when President and Mrs. Roosevelt decided the war made them inappropriate.

Because the diplomatic corps has grown, another dinner will be held for those who could not be accommodated last night. The state social season continues through February.

YOUNGSTER DOING HOME WORK IN COUNTY JAIL

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Nov. 27—James Slaughter, a Kalamazoo central high school student, is doing his homework in the county jail.

Judge George Weimer sentenced the youth to 30 days' imprisonment on burglary charges with the provision that he be permitted to leave the jail every day to attend school.

Weimer made the unprecedented ruling after Slaughter told him he probably would make the honor roll if his schooling was not interrupted.

WEALTHY JAPS ARE ORDERED TO GIVE UP ASSETS

Allied Council Launches New Program To Dissolve All Japanese Monopolies

TOKYO, Nov. 27—Allied headquarters, in a smashing blow at Japanese monopolists, today ordered all assets of the 10 wealthiest businesses and families in the land converted into 10-year non-negotiable bonds and placed all their holdings and property under its jurisdiction.

Announcement of the order followed a discussion of the Zaiatsu at the allied four-power council meeting earlier today.

Maj. R. M. Cooper, Washington, D. C., chief of the liquidation branch of headquarters' anti-trust and cartels division, said that the order was part of "a broad program to dissolve monopolistic Japanese combines."

"For the first time, headquarters will be able to estimate the wealth that these 10 families actually have," he said.

The 10 families affected are the Aikawa, Asano, Furukawa, Iwasaki, Nitsui, Nakajima, Nomura, Okura, Sumitomo and Yasuda.

The directive transferred the Zaiatsu assets, including living expenses, all of which were hitherto controlled by the finance ministry, to the holding company liquidation commission.

Other Zaiatsu combines may be added to a later list and their assets frozen into government bonds, if it is determined they are "undesirable elements" in present-day Japanese life.

The term Zaiatsu is used to designate the Japanese families that personally directed and organized the huge trusts, holding companies and industries that financed and encouraged Japan's imperialist expansion.

At the allied council meeting, Lt. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, the Soviet delegate, had asked for a report on the progress of the dissolution of the Zaiatsu industrial empire.

Derevyanko suggested that Russia, China and Britain be permitted to attend sessions of the holding companies liquidation commission which headquarters established to dissolve financial and industrial combines. The Soviet delegate said the three nations would be able to satisfy (Continued on Page Two)

DEMOCRATS MAY TRY TO OUST LABORITE SOLON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Rep. John E. Rankin, D. Miss., said today a block of southern Democrats may challenge the right of Rep. Vito Marcantonio, New York American laborite, to take his seat in the new congress.

Rankin's statement followed an announcement that agents of the house campaign investigating committee would be sent into Marcantonio's district to investigate the circumstances under which he was reelected.

Chairman Percy Priest, D. Tenn., said the investigators would seek to determine whether there was coercion or intimidation of voters. This, he said, will include a study of whether the slaying of Joseph Scottoreggio, a Republican worker in Marcantonio's district, had any connection with the campaign.

In the senate, Republicans already have served notice that they will try to prevent Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, D. Miss., from taking his seat. This move is based on charges that Bilbo tried to prevent Negroes from voting in the Mississippi primary election and allegations that he accepted gratuities from Mississippi war contractors.

NO EDITION OF HERALD ON THANKSGIVING DAY

There will be no edition of The Circleville Herald Thursday as employees join in the observance of the Thanksgiving holiday.

City Store Lights Not Turned Off

Mayor Ben H. Gordon said Wednesday that municipal authorities had no authority to compel observance by Circleville stores and other downtown business establishments of the dim-out ordered by the Civilian Production Administration to conserve fuel-produced electricity.

Mayor Gordon pointed out, however, that individual violators of the CPA order face possible fines and even imprisonment. He said he understood that under the War Powers Act the federal government officials possess the power to compel obedience to the dim-out decree.

The dim-out was scheduled to become effective Monday night but it was not observed in Circleville. Tuesday night very few stores and other businesses in downtown Circleville obeyed the command to extinguish window lights and electric signs.

A CPA official at Washington said that willful violation of the dim-out order is punishable by a fine of $10,000 maximum, or imprisonment for one year, or both. Mayor Gordon said that if the dim-out order is enforced in Circleville the enforcement will have to be done by federal officers.

Mayors of both Columbus and Chillicothe have announced the municipal officials will not attempt to compel compliance with the dim-out order in those cities.

Mayor Gordon Wednesday received a letter from the Ohio public (Continued on Page Two)

HOUSING BOSS MAY QUIT JOB

Wyatt Said Ready To Resign Unless He Gets Backing Of President Truman

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Associates of Wilson W. Wyatt said today he may resign as housing expediter unless he gets solid backing from President Truman on his veterans housing program.

The showdown may come today at a scheduled White House conference between Wyatt and Mr. Truman.

Wyatt was hoping for strong presidential support. If he does not get it, his friends said privately, Wyatt probably will quit the government. He has a lucrative law practice awaiting him in Louisville, Ky.

On Mr. Truman's desk for a week has been a report from the housing chief urging sweeping new steps to produce low-priced homes for veterans under the new law.

The President asked for the report when he jinked price controls—including those on building materials—on Nov. 9. Wyatt hoped to get his reaction today.

Forestry service sources meanwhile warned that effects of the coal strike may be quickly felt in the housing program through curtailed lumber shipments.

Lumber stocks are on a "hand-to-mouth" basis, officials said, and any reduction in rail transportation (Continued on Page Two)

RUSSIA, WEST ARE SPLIT ON RACIAL PROBLEM

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Nov. 27—Russia and the western powers split today on a precedent-setting dispute over racial discrimination.

Andre Gromyko of the Soviet Union urged the United Nations to ask South Africa to halt alleged discrimination against its citizens of Indian descent.

The United States, Great Britain and a host of smaller nations wanted to ask the international court of justice to rule whether UN had a right to intervene. The question was whether South Africa's treatment of Indians was an international dispute or a domestic affair outside the scope of UN. The decision would affect UN's approach to discrimination in other countries.

JURY PICKING HELD UP

Government Counsel Says Lewis Not Entitled To Regular Jury

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough today told John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers (AFL) that they made "a very great mistake" in shutting down the nation's mines before the court could rule on legal issues in the coal dispute.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—John L. Lewis' lawyers today demanded dismissal of contempt charges that were brought against him because he refused to cancel the strike of 400,000 soft coal miners.

The defense based its demand on the contention that Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough had no right to issue the anti-strike order which Lewis and his United Mine Workers union (AFL) are ignoring.

The first defense argument was made by Joseph A. Padway, chief AFL counsel who flew here from Honolulu last night to join Lewis' legal fight against the government.

The defense tactics suggested prolonged legal skirmishing was in prospect before Lewis' trial on contempt charges got down to the business of picking an advisory jury for Goldsborough and presentation of testimony.

Padway asserted the defense contention that the government was prohibited by the Norris-LaGuardia act of 1932 from resorting to the injunctive process to break the coal strike.

The massive, heavy-browed boss of the United Mine Workers (AFL) went to court early, arriving at the building at 9:47 a. m. accompanied by Joseph A. Padway, chief AFL attorney who flew to Lewis' aid from Honolulu.

The contempt charges grew out of Lewis' refusal to obey a temporary order by Goldsborough directing him to withdraw the contract cancellation which kicked off the strike last Thursday.

Lewis took the same seat he held at Monday's hearing at which he was held for today's trial. He sat impassively in the second row of chairs facing the bench on the extreme left of the courtroom.

Goldsborough entered the courtroom at 9:55. The court immediately was called to order. Assistant (Continued on Page Two)

OLDEST KNOWN HUMAN REMAINS ARE REVEALED

LONDON, Nov. 27—Several layers of what can only be termed pre-historic villages—arranged like a multi-decker sandwich—have been discovered in British East Africa and they appear to be a couple of ice ages older than previously known human diggings.

Dr. L. S. B. Leakey was exploring ancient lake beds 42 miles northwest of Nairobi, in Kenya colony, when the discovery was made.

"My wife," Dr. Leakey wrote recently in the Times, "suddenly walked on to an area so thickly strewn with stone age handaxes and cleavers that one could scarcely walk over it without treading on them." That was in 1942.

By the next year a patient investigation had revealed a "whole series of camp floors of Acheulean man such as had never been found anywhere. A whole series of the camp sites, one above the other, were separated by beds of clay."

PHILLIPS MAY QUIT OSU
COLUMBUS, Nov. 27—Tommy Phillips, Berea forward passing ace, will leave Ohio State for some other western conference school or for professional football, it was reported here today by a writer for Scripps-Howard newspapers. The story said that Phillips was disappointed in failure of Ohio State coaches to call on his passing ability except in the fading minutes of losing games this season.

U M W LAWYERS ASK DISMISSAL OF U. S. CHARGE

Prolonged Legal Arguments
Indicated As Mine Chief
Goes On Trial

Attorney General John F. Sweeney, Padway and UMW Counsel Welly K. Hopkins stepped to the bench for a whispered two minute huddle with the judge.

Goldsborough then commented that it appeared the first question to settle was whether the Norris-LaGuardia act, limiting the use of injunctions in labor disputes, applied to the government's dispute with the UMW.

The judge disclosed that the union had filed a motion yesterday to dismiss the proceedings. He said that motion would be considered first.

This and any other such motions apparently had to be disposed of before the court could get down to the business of picking an advisory jury for Goldsborough.

Goldsborough pointed out that Lewis was entitled to a jury trial if the LaGuardia act should be held applicable. He apparently meant a regular jury with full jury powers rather than the advisory jury which has been ordered.

Sweeney, who has contended that the Norris-LaGuardia act did not apply to the present case, said he did not believe Lewis was entitled to a jury trial as a matter of right. He suggested that the court proceed with the hearing.

The prosecutor said the government expected to present about 10 witnesses, each of whom would testify briefly. He added that he felt the question of the Norris-LaGuardia act should be deferred until after witnesses had been heard.

Sweeney repeated his insistence that Lewis was not entitled to a regular jury trial under any circumstances but said "the government is prepared to proceed which ever way the court desires."

Sweeney suggested that there was some question as to whether Lewis wanted a jury and said this could be settled later.

Lewis faced a possible fine or jail sentence if he lost the court battle, started by the government to force a back-to-work signal from the chief of the United Mine Workers (AFL).

Justice department attorneys hoped for a swift trial because each day of the strike was costing hundreds of thousands of tons of coal and aggravating the already serious effects on the national economy. The selection of an "advisory jury" could cause delays, however.

The trial before Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough will settle these questions:
1. Whether Lewis could legally terminate the wage contract he negotiated with the government after the government seized the soft coal mines last May.

2. Whether the restraining order issued by Goldsborough Nov. 15 required Lewis to withdraw his notice terminating the contract Nov. 20.

3. Whether the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act applied in the government's dispute with Lewis.

The government has charged Lewis' contract termination notice was in effect a strike call and that he had no power to serve it. The miners struck the soft coal industry when it became effective.

Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug insisted that the contract ran until the government turned the mines back to their owners.

That was the government's argument when it persuaded Goldsborough to issue the restraining order prohibiting Lewis from permitting the termination notice "to continue in effect." The government also contended that the Norris-LaGuardia act did not apply to the government.

The union gave a hint of its strategy at a preliminary hearing Monday. It denied that the court had authority to issue the restraining order and Goldsborough interpreted the union statement as an argument that the Norris-LaGuardia act applied.

The union also asserted that it had done nothing to disturb the status quo since the restraining order was issued. A restraining order normally preserves the status quo in a dispute between two parties until a hearing can be held. In this case, however, Lewis' failure to act resulted in a mine shutdown last Thursday because the notice already had been served.

Goldsborough's contempt citation provided for a trial before a rarely-used "advisory jury" of 12 ally emerged from the committee, none of the United Nations would be bound to comply. The assembly can do no more than recommend that UN take certain action, but none is required to heed the recommendation.

If the assembly were to include troops at home in the inventory proposal over Russia's objections, for example, the Soviet government would be breaking no law or commitment if it did not make public the strength of its home forces.

Molotov's second proposal, introduced yesterday in the committee's fifth day of debate on the troops issue, showed that Russia wants the UN security council to handle disarmament proposals once the assembly debates the subject.

This caused speculation that Britain and the United States might prefer to place the disarmament question in some new commission like the UN atomic energy commission, rather than in the council, where the big five veto power can be applied.

Any serious discussion of this matter was at best several days distant, however, for the political committee was scheduled to resume its wrangle over the veto power before taking up disarmament.

The veto issue was shelved 10 days ago in a futile hope that the big five would agree privately on a way to limit the veto's application in the council.

Two attempts at such agreement were enough to convince the western powers that Molotov meant what he said when he proposed to resist any effort to tell the big five how to use their special voting privilege. The big five sent the issue back to the political committee, where Australia, Cuba and the Philippines were ready to lead a renewed but equally vain assault on the veto.

The administration's minimum price for abandoning the court action appeared to be a quick end of the strike and assurance that Lewis would ask the mine operators instead of the government for a new contract. The dispute was taken into the courts after Lewis had refused to agree to a 60-day strike truce while he negotiated with the operators.

It was indicated that any attempt to revive UMW-industry negotiations would not crystallize for several days, if at all.

workers were seeking to avert a strike threatened over the issue of "piped" broadcasts. Substantial agreement has been reached on wages, the union announced.

At Chicago the strategy committee of the CIO packinghouse workers met to consider strike action against the big five packers unless wage demands are granted.

Coal shortages resulting from the bituminous miners strike forced drastic new cuts today in production of basic steel, increasing the threat of early unemployment for hundreds of thousands of workers in steel-dependent industries.

Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. announced closing of more than half of its open hearth steel furnaces in the Pittsburgh area. The company, largest subsidiary of U. S. Steel, disclosed it already had lost 11,145 tons production in ingot (raw) steel as a result of the United Mine Workers walkout.

More than 3,500 workers were idled as the company took 66 of its 129 open hearth steel furnaces out of production in the Pittsburgh-Youngstown district.

More than 50,000 workers have been furloughed in the steel industry alone and the effects of the strike were spreading rapidly. Foundries at Fremont, O., and Erie, Pa., suspended because of pig iron and coal shortages. The great Western Sugar company reported it will be forced to close four beet processing plants this week end.

Approximately 10,000 railroad workers have been laid off.

GAS COMPANY IS GIVEN RIGHT TO EXPAND SERVICE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—The federal power commission today authorized enlargement of the Ohio Fuel Gas company transmission system to facilitate delivery at peak periods during 1947 at an estimated cost of $3,370,000.

The additional deliveries will be from the United Fuel Gas company and the Panhandle Eastern Pipeline company.

An underground natural gas storage project will be built in Lorain and Medina counties to be known as the Wellington storage project and a 2,000-horsepower compressor station will be constructed in Lorain county.

Other projects include a 2,400-horsepower compressor station in Lawrence county and about 88 miles of 16-inch gas transmission lines in Lorain, Fairfield, Licking and Knox counties.

Ohio Fuel serves the Columbus, Toledo and Springfield areas.

VICE PRESIDENT OF BANK HELD IN SWINDLE CASE

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 — The assistant vice president of a Wall street bank was held in $100,000 bond today as a material witness in the $750,000 Mergenthaler linotype company swindle.

The district attorney's office announced the arrest of Lewis Lalos, 35, assistant vice president of the Hellenic Bank and Trust company, last night a few hours after a grand jury returned indictments against four suspects on a total of 149 counts of forgery and grand larceny.

The suspects were William Arthur Nickel, the $64 a week Mergenthaler cashier; Jimmy Collins, 44, an ex-convict; Isidore Rappaport, 55, a wealthy real estate operator and also an ex-convict; and Irving (Izzy the Eel) Cohen.

All four suspects pleaded innocent to the charges and were sent to jail in lieu of $750,000 bail. Nickel's bail was set at $150,000; Collins and Rappaport were ordered held in $250,000 bail each, and Cohen's was set at $100,000.

COURT DELAYS RULING ON JEW REFUGEE ACTION

JERUSALEM, Nov. 27—The Palestine supreme court took under advisement today a case testing the legality of the deportation of Jewish refugees, thus delaying a final decision on the issue which had produced wholesale violence in the Holy Land.

Sir William Fitzgerald did not announce when the final judgment would be forthcoming. His preliminary orders halted temporarily the deportation to Cyprus of uncertified refugees coming to Palestine.

A shipload of more than 3,300 refugees waited in Haifa harbor for the supreme court ruling on a writ of habeas corpus to stay their transfer to Cyprus.

in the Danube area. Surely, he pleaded, American boys did not go to war to establish an international regime on the Danube. The same goes for the Dardanelles, he said. Obviously, the Russians must have predominant control of the Black Sea straits. They would be foolish to agree to internationalization unless the United States agrees to internationalize the Panama Canal and Britain accepts an international regime over Suez and Gibraltar.

"Elliott also thought that the Soviet Union had never broken its word. While the United States and Britain repeatedly violated their pledges at Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, the Soviets faithfully observed theirs. The Russian failure to withdraw troops on time from Iran was perfectly justified. What else could Russia do after Britain, with American connivance, had sent in 7,000 so-called oil experts and technicians? The Russians must also build up friendly regimes in neighboring countries as a counterweight to American and British expansionist policies.

"Elliott ended the disclosure with a challenge to the audience. 'Can anyone here,' he demanded, 'name one instance in which the United States acted to further the cause of peace?' After a momentary hush an American correspondent suggested: had not the United States done everything to strengthen the power and prestige of the United Nations? But Elliott was ready for that one. 'You know as well as I do,' he told the questioner, 'that the United States is supporting the UN for purely selfish and imperialistic reasons.'

CITY SCHOOLS GET MORE MONEY IF BILL PASSES

OEA Recommends Program To Increase Ohio School Funds $21,000,000

Circleville's public schools will receive $113,767 as compared with their present annual revenue of $64,586, it was announced Wednesday, in the event the Ohio legislature approves the state-aid program proposed by the Ohio Education Association.

That organization Wednesday recommended that the new legislature appropriate $153,000,000 to run the state's schools in 1947-48—an increase of about $21,000,000 per year.

The recommendation, to be submitted at the OEA convention here Dec. 26-28 for approval, would provide an average teachers' salary of $2,250 per year as compared with the present average of $2,010.

In announcing a two point proposal OEA assistant Secretary B. I. Griffith said the increased expenditure of public funds was necessary "to begin repair of the damage to Ohio's school system caused by the departure of teachers for better paying jobs."

Recommendations of the organization were:

1. Increase flat state support from $44 to an average of $58 per pupil.

2. Broaden the state foundation program to equalize educational facilities by raising the minimum supporting level from an average of $66.50 to $106 per pupil in average daily membership.

The program would also provide that schools receive a minimum tax levy of four mills as compared with the present three mill minimum required to receive additional aid under the foundation program.

OEA spokesmen said a significant feature of the recommendations was that flat state support would be based on enrollment rather than average daily attendance.

B. A. Stevens, association research director, pointed out that this method for distribution would be more equitable since schools must be equipped on the basis of total enrollment rather than average attendance.

He estimated that if the OEA recommendations were adopted Ohio—both state and local districts—would spend about $160,000,000 annually on educational institutions, with the state paying close to 50 per cent of the total cost.

Under the OEA plan between 80 and 90 additional school districts would receive minimum equalization aid. There are now 1,470 districts receiving the foundation help.

Stevens said only a comparatively few small one-room schools now receive less than four mills tax levy for educational purposes. Most of these are in Washington, Belmont and Monroe counties, he said.

"Effects of the proposed expansion of the equalization program would be far reaching," Stevens said. "An estimated 610,000 would receive equalization aid compared with only 250,000 at present."

"If put into effect, these proposals would go a long way toward reversing the downward trend in Ohio education and would once again make school teaching an attractive career for young men and women," he said.

Stevens said adoption of the OEA program would "still place Ohio far behind the recently adopted education programs of Michigan and California."

JAYCEES PLAN SAFETY PROJECT

Members Agree To Sponsor Project Each Month At Meeting

During a lengthy discussion it was definitely decided that the Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce is very much alive and that the organization is not by any means dead.

The discussion waxed fast and furious at the monthly session held Tuesday night in Hanley's Tea Room. The 20 members present eventually agreed that the Junior Chamber is a long way from being extinct.

Members who fail to regularly attend the monthly meetings were rather severely criticized but no definite action was taken along this line.

One of the questions under discussion was whether the group should concentrate its energy on one big project monthly or annually and it was agreed to focus the organization's efforts on one project each month.

The project for the ensuing month is aimed at school safety in Circleville and the committee directing it is headed by Frank Wantz as chairman with the backing of the entire membership. Paul Warden is chairman of publicity.

Following adjournment the Jaycees proceeded in a body to Memorial hall where all pitched in and helped to decorate the auditorium in preparation for the Jaycees Thanksgiving dance which will be held from 10 p. m. Wednesday to 1 a. m. Thursday.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

A Lesson In Conservation

We were sitting on Bill Webster's porch the other night, chatting over a glass of beer—when the talk turned to forest preservation, soil erosion, and other things that affect a farming community.

Judge Cunningham speaks up: "It's all right to worry about conserving our natural resources," he says, "but there's a far bigger problem when it comes to conservation—and that's preserving our democratic way of life, our sense of personal freedom, our respect for one another's rights."

From where I sit, the Judge is right. All America's great resources, our abundant natural wealth, are lost the minute we lose the right to work them as free people in a free land!

Whenever you see or hear of an encroachment on our rights—whether it's the right to free speech, or the right to vote as we see fit, or the right to enjoy a friendly glass of beer in licensed, law-abiding places... watch out!

ILLINOI MADE FEW MISTAKES IN BIG NINE PLAY

Final Statistics Show That Michigan Led League In Offense And Defense

By Tommy Devine

United Press Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, Nov. 27 — It is a football axiom that the team which makes the fewest mistakes wins and Illinois' Western Conference champions today were willing to vouch for that fact.

The final official Big Nine statistics show the title-winning Illinois finishing fourth both offensively and defensively. But whereas Coach Ray Eliot's combination trailed in those departments the figures reveal it committed few blunders that opened the scoring gates for its rivals.

Illinois won two key games — from Michigan and Ohio State — on pass interceptions with which Sam Zatkoff and Julie Rykovich raced 53 and 98 yards respectively. Yet in seven conference contests Illinois had only three out of 71 aeriels intercepted.

The Illinois passing game was not particularly effective with its completion average of .309 out-ranking only Wisconsin's aerial game, but Eliot's proteges seldom threw the ball where a rival could snare it.

Illinois likewise demonstrated sure and clever ball handling and lost the ball on fumbles only nine times in seven league battles.

The bulk of team statistical honors were grabbed by Michigan. The Wolverines led in the two most important departments, offense and defense, and also set the pace in six other classifications.

The Wolverines averaged 340.9 yards per game to top the offense and limited their opponents to an average net gain of 136.3 yards per contest to lead that bracket.

Michigan's other top honors came in points scored with an average of 23.6 per game; in opponent points, with 6.6 per game; in yards gained by passing with 145.5; in opponents yards gained by rushing with 117 per game; in average yardage on interceptions with 42.3 per contest; and in permitting opponents to complete only .205 per cent of their passes.

A Michigan star, Halfback Bob Chappuis grabbed the major individual honors by setting a new total offensive record of 1039 yards. The old mark was 562 yards established by Otto Graham of Northwestern in 1942.

Chappuis also set a new pass completion record when he clicked on 36 out of 64 attempts for a mark of .563. The old record was .544, set by Dick Good of Illinois in 1940.

Chappuis' total offensive mark was almost double that of his closest rival.

Ben Raimondi of Indiana led in pass completions with 48 out of 80 attempts for a net of 598 yards. Bob De Moss of Purdue was next with 45 completions in 94 tries.

Art Dufelmeyer of Illinois led in ball carrying effectiveness with an average of eight yards per try on 38 attempts. Vic Schwall of Northwestern was the leading scorer with 40 points; Lou Mihajlovich of Indiana topped the pass receivers with 16 catches; and Johnny Calvin of Purdue paced the punters with an average of 43 yards per kick.

THREE TIGERS' OPPONENTS ON ALL STAR SQUAD

Beil of Logan was mentioned among the ends; Lohr, Logan, center, and Walston, Linden McKinley back.

UCLA MENTOR IS UNITED PRESS COACH OF WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—His boys had plenty of kicks coming and they made them both on and off the field.

He instructed them to "kick, kick, and kick some more" and when they got into the dressing room at half time they kicked about having to kick so much.

But he was firm, this likeable guy who coached only high school players until last season. The boys went out and kicked some more and the strategy paid off with a victory that put them in the Rose Bowl.

He's the United Press coach of the week, Bert Labracherie of the unbeaten and untied University of California at Los Angeles Bruins, who beat their home-town rivals

IN BILBO'S EXCLUSION BATTLE

Troop 8

The meeting was called to order. The promise was given. The roll was called and the minutes were read.

Mrs. Brehmer gave the names of some girls from other countries who have asked to correspond with American Girl Scouts. Members discussed adopting a family in Belgium or Holland to send Christmas gifts to.

Ann Curtin announced that the Senior Scout Troop always furnished the Christmas tree at headquarters, so this year Troop 8 will be responsible for it.

Mrs. Brehmer asked us if we would be interested in inviting people who have careers like nursing, etc., to speak to us about the educational, health, etc. requirements for our chosen careers. Mrs. Brehmer said she would ask at Berger hospital if they could use three or four Girl Scouts as nurses aides, after school and on Saturdays and Sundays.

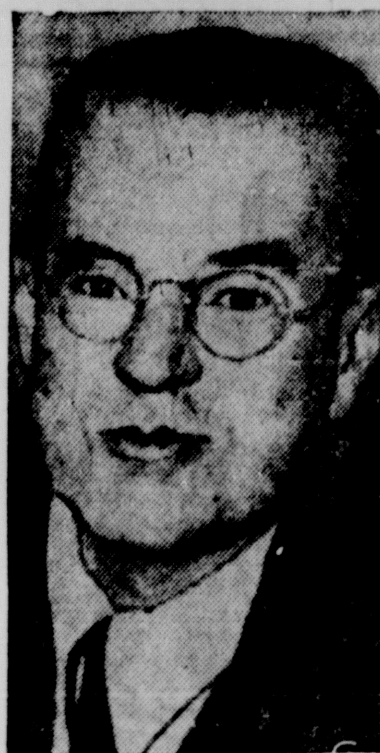

Mrs. Stout suggested that we do a pantomime for the Christmas program on an old Bohemian legend. The Christmas program is to be held at the Episcopal church. The troop decided to do the pantomime.

If the program committee decides to have refreshments for the Christmas party Troop 8 will be responsible for the decorations and table center-pieces.

The meeting was closed with a friendship circle and "taps."

Missing Since '42

A BOSTON cab driver, above, stepped into a police station asking aid in patching a memory that went dead in 1942 and within four hours was identified as Phillip B. Skerrye, 47, Harvard graduate and instructor in a half-dozen New England preparatory schools. Apparently missing since he taught at Tilton academy in 1937, Skerrye's memory was probably partially restored when he was struck by a car the night before he reported at the police station. He told police the first thing he remembers since 1942 was being picked up by someone on the street after being struck in Boston. (International)

CORN LOAN RATE OF $1.20 SET FOR PICKAWAY

Government corn loans will be available to Pickaway county farmers at a rate of $1.20 per bushel. John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway County Agricultural Conservation committee announced today.

"The nation's corn supply almost equals that of 1942, but there is considerably less livestock on farms now than in 1942," Mr. Boggs said. "Should the large corn supply push prices down too far, the corn loan will be the farmer's protection. With a corn loan, each Pickaway county farmer can be sure of at least $1.20 a bushel for his crop."

The basic operation of the corn loan program will be the same as in recent years. Every individual who either produced corn or has a share in corn produced this year, is eligible for a corn loan.

"The 1947 corn loan program offers price support for a longer period of time than past corn loan programs," Mr. Boggs added. "Government loans on 1946 corn will be available through next July, whereas last year loans were available only through May."

Loans will be available on ear corn from December 1, 1946, through July 31, 1947, and on shelled corn from June 1 through July 31, 1947.

CAESARISM

It is probably no exaggeration to say that John L. Lewis is the sort of man of whom Caesars are made. Given an opportunity in a world grown careless, and "clothed in a little brief authority," such a man might go farther than merely "strutting his little hour upon the stage." In many a country, ancient or modern, such a reckless and ambitious adventurer has broken through the controls which normal civilization establishes, and has destroyed a free nation.

It is unnecessary to assume that we Americans are on the verge of destruction. Our government is the oldest and steadiest in the world. But even so, it might be so shaken by an unexpected onslaught from within that it would never be the same again. If the great Roman Empire, perhaps the nearest approach in history to our own system, could fall to slow ruin when weakened by carelessness and disregard of established practices and principles, our own way of life might some day disappear almost with the suddenness of an atomic bomb.

Never has it been so necessary as now for nations to face facts, to know what is going on in the world, to preserve the good and avoid the evil.

BEGINNING AT HOME

In a fusty tiny volume published by Appleton's in 1883 and titled "Don't", under "advice to womankind appear these words:

"Don't wear at home spotted or faded gowns, or anything that is not neat and appropriate. Appear at the breakfast table fresh, cool and delicious, like a newly-plucked flower. Dress for the pleasure and admiration of your family."

Perhaps the harassed mother of a lively young brood will find it a bit difficult to "appear like a newly plucked flower" between getting father off with coffee and toast inside him on the 8:15, and milk and cereal into his small son and daughter. But she can try. And anyway it's good to be reminded, good for men as well as women, that not only in dress but in a lot of other matters aiming at "the pleasure and admiration of one's family" is just about the most important job anybody can have. If the family is working on a harmonious plane, other things pretty much take care of themselves. A world full of well-run families would be a mighty nice place. And there wouldn't be nearly so many problems about.

As for coalition, a lot of people are getting worried about this winter's coal. Where's John L. Lewis?

They say time and tide wait for no man, but gosh, how men wait for women!

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . . Hour by Hour

Pages From the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a gloomy morning, the house dank, my blood pressure high and my mind full of wonder as to how much longer I will be able to get away with refusal to start the day by bowing toward the homestead of John L. Lewis. Not long, I expect, if some informer turns me in at Washington. It is extremely difficult for me to appreciate that all Americans except the hordes of John L. are responsible for the coal strike and the critical situation that faces our America. We must be guilty, for one of the alphabetical rat-traps says so. The Civilian Production Administration has announced that violators of "brown out" orders may be punished by a fine up to $10,000 and a year in prison. Also discontinuance of service can be invoked.

While John Q. Public is being kicked in the teeth and made to appear as a patriotic citizen only because of dire threats, John L. Lewis and his miners are patted on the back, cajoled and encouraged. No one is fooled by the hubb in Washington. Everyone knows that the miners will get just what they want. The only conjecture is as to how long the strike will be permitted to continue before the so-called government gives in. Why not give it to Lewis right now instead of landing another devastating blow on reconversion? And then give it to Lewis and other labor leaders of his stripe when the new congress meets. We are expecting things out of that new congress. And if the politicians know what is good for their political futures they will see that we get what we expect. It is high time for Washington to be giving some consideration to the general public rather than exclusively to the organized minorities.

The scrivener is no opponent of organized labor, but he does stand opposed to organized labor heading down the road that leads to destruction of institutions that are solely American and which have made this a land worth fighting for.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 27—The dictionary is taking one of its worst beatings in years from the typewriters of music men and other observers seeking to record their appreciation of the Joe Mooney quartet. Webster didn't include enough superlatives.

Mooney, the boss and accordion and piano player of the group, has been hailed as a musical genius both as arranger and performer. Those who know claim that he does things with his left hand at the piano that are out of this world. They are only slightly less lyrical about Andy Fitzgerald, clarinetist; Jack Hotop, guitarist, and Gate Frega, bass. Gate's name, by the way, has no connection with the swing language word; he was christened Gaetan.

But for anyone who isn't an expert at picking out individual excellence, but simply knows what he likes, the main thing is the ensemble effect. And, brother, that's good. If you close your eyes, you could swear at times that there are 24 and not four men playing. This impression isn't created by noise volume either. Mooney never causes eardrum fatigue.

Joe doesn't want his stuff classified as 'sweet' or 'swing' or whatever the latest word may be. "We just play music," he says. With a lot of hot bands you get plenty of improvisation and no idea of what the basic melody is. Mooney and his men can improvise with the best of them, but you always know what the tune is.

The Mooney bandwagon began to load up last Summer while they were playing at a Paterson, N. J., joint. Trade magazine writers went off their rockers about the combination. Then the boys moved into town to Dixon's on West 52nd St., which these days is only a shadow of the "swing street" of a few years ago, and the big parade began. They're still there. They are on the network Monday nights at 10:15 p. m., with Paul Whiteman himself doing the announcing as musical director. They have guested on many other programs and will have their first records issued in January by Decca.

Mooney, of course, is no Topsy. He's been around developing for years. He was playing piano for radio programs when in his teens, was a staff arranger for station WLW in Cincinnati in the early 30's, learned the accordion to win a bet that the instrument could be made to "swing," played accordion with Whiteman's band and off and on has arranged for the biggest band leaders in the business. He started a small unit in 1942 and a year later was in an auto accident that laid him up for two years. He began organizing his present group last year. Mooney, Fitzgerald and Frega are all Paterson boys.

I must add that Joe also does vocals, and does them as well as he does his other chores. As far as he is concerned, life has begun at 35.

As we start whittling down our war debt, many of us wonder whether Uncle Sam or the home mortgage should come first.

The time seems to be approaching when a lot of well-meaning people start getting sentimental again about the Germans.

Diagnosing Rheumatic Fever

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

Rheumatic fever has been called Juvenile Enemy No. 1 and rightly so, for this treacherous disease not only accounts for 95 per cent of heart trouble among children but is also the chief cause of death and disability in young adults.

Occurring most often in children from five to eight years of age, it has a habit of coming back time after time, causing more heart damage with each recurrence. Thus, it is important that this dread disease, which so often hides behind what appears to be no more than a severe cold, be diagnosed at its first appearance so that measures to prevent its return can be instituted at once. Fortunately, doctors have two aids to accurate diagnosis—X-ray and what is known as a blood sedimentation test.

Exact Cause Unknown

Although the exact cause of rheumatic fever is not known, it would appear that poor housing, dampness and improper living conditions in general contribute to its development. Rheumatic fever often develops following a sore throat or tonsillitis. The first symptoms may be pain or soreness in the joints about a week after the throat trouble has cleared up. Other symptoms of the disorder are fever, paleness of the skin, failure to gain weight, and rapid beating of the heart.

Of course, whenever there is any suspicion that the disease is present, a physician should be called in at once so that a diagnosis can be made. Parents should not ignore joint pains when they occur in a child and think of them as "growing pains" because growth does not cause pain in the joints. These mild joint pains often may be the first sign of rheumatic fever. Often the first symptom is just plain tiredness.

No Specific Cure

Unfortunately, at present there is no specific cure for rheumatic fever. It would appear that the best treatment available is long continued rest in bed. Preparations known as the salicylates are useful in relieving the symptoms to some extent. Often it may be necessary to keep a child in bed for a period of three to four months or even longer. It has been thought, too, that giving one of the sulfonamide drugs regularly to children who have had an attack of rheumatic fever may be helpful in warding off attacks of sore throat and tonsillitis and thus preventing recurrent attacks.

A great deal of research is being carried out in order to determine the exact cause of rheumatic fever so that a more specific type of treatment may be found. Until that date comes, a child's best defense against this heart-crippler must remain in watchful parents—parents, who see to it that he gets the right foods for good nourishment; parents who are well enough informed to know when to suspect that it may be present; parents who are careful enough to call the doctor immediately when they have observed anything that might point to rheumatic fever.

The heart Q, then set up his thirteen with the A, which dropped the K. He scored the spade K and Q, then led the club J. There came the critical play, though West didn't know it as he took the trick with his K. The diamond 4 to the 9 was won by the 10, and East returned the Q to the A. East now took the club 5 with the A, but had to return a club to the Q. The heart 8 then made the game trick for South. If West had refused to win the club J on the eighth trick, South could never have reached his hand. With the dummy taking that trick, West could have won the second club and East the third, thus preventing South from reaching his own hand to use the set-up heart thirteen. Thus he could not have scored more than eight tricks and would have been down one.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

NOW THE ticking of the watch on her arm seemed to grow louder and louder . . .

Raphael opened the door of the apartment, took the small bag from her and bowed gallantly over her hand.

"Leedy . . . how nice! Come in . . . It is always wonderful to see you. But such an unattractive place to come to! No pictures on the wall and bare windows. The rooms are denuded and ugly. But only a few more hours and we go home."

Lydia's heart was a hammer beating fast. Though tense and excited, Raphael did not seem surprised to see her. Hadn't he and Theo thought it odd that Kirby was not here when they had come to this morning? Raphael spoke of bare walls and windows from which the pictures and draperies had been taken, but he did not say that Kirby was not here. With all personal things removed, the living room looked as impersonal as a hotel room.

I stand here and think these things while Chris is in court . . . He's there now! After more than three years he has gone into a courtroom on his cane . . . and I am not there . . .

When Raphael sat opposite her she asked, "Is Theo here?"

"Oh, yes, yes, of course she is here. And in a few minutes I go. I go to leave you and Theo alone. I shall take a walk and look at New York for the last time. Theo, my poor darling . . . But she is very brave. She is such a little person to be so brave. Do you know I have never seen her cry? She is quite perfect."

"Were you expecting me?" Lydia asked.

He smiled. "Yes, but eat is not—how you say—my business? That is why I take a walk and you see Theo alone—yes?"

"You know, Raphael. But how do you know?"

He laughed. "What you weel talk to Theo about? Me, I know nuzzing. These family matters, I am no good at them. Besides, this is my happy day. I cannot be sad even for Kirby on this day. Forgive me. But I am going home today. Theo is my wife. To me she is not anybody's mother. So I do not know how she feels. So please, do not ask me any questions." He laughed again and shrugged. "I talk and talk to take up the time until Theo comes out of her room to see you."

"I haven't much time," Lydia said.

"That is what all of you Americans say. You all say you have no time. You go on saying it until truly you do not have any more time. Puff! The time is out and you have not done any of the things you were going to do when you had the time. It's absurd—yes?"

"It is absurd—but how did you know that Kirby had run away and married Wade?"

He shook a reproachful finger at her and laughed at her.

"See—there you go asking me questions again. Kirby is a darling. She is pure Americana. I tell Theo that many times. Kirby is pure Americana. We have had much fun and good laughs. She weel always make men laugh. Men more than women. And men want to laugh. I have seen women who had nothing except a gift of laughter be much loved. Kirby is a peasant girl who glories in being a peasant girl. You think I talk nonsense while you have not much time? It is not nonsense to say that Kirby is lucky to have found her niche so young."

Questions were pyramiding in her mind when Theo came in the room. She wore a beautifully fitting suit the color of ripe tomatoes.

Raphael sprang to his feet and went to her and kissed her cheek.

"I go now, darling," he said. "I tell Leedy nuzzing. She weel always am a bad boy . . . rude. She has not much time. Shall I get you something?"

"No, darling, nothing. Everything is packed, isn't it? You have our tickets?"

"Here in my pocket," he laughed. "Close to my heart as you are."

Theo said nothing until he left. Then she went to the fireplace and leaned against it.

"If I could cry, Lydia. If I only could cry."

"Kirby doesn't want you to cry over her. She's very happy."

Theo shook her beautiful head. "I don't want to cry over Kirby. I want to cry for shame that I have been such a selfish woman and such a poor mother."

"I'm a little bewildered by all this. How did you know?"

Theo's china-blue eyes had the look of a sad child.

"Chris came shortly after we came home and I was wondering where Kirby was. I thought nothing of it when she didn't write. I thought perhaps she'd spent last night with Alan's nurse or even with you. Chris had to come in town early this morning, he said, and he wanted to spare you the telling of bad news."

"It isn't bad news, Theo."

Theo's trembling violated her composure. The blue veins in her frail hands were large and taut.

"I can't cry," she said. "Andrew detested a weeping woman. You can deny tears so long that they dry up at the source. And Andrew is dead. I read it in the Boston paper. He's dead. Did you know it? Did you know about him. Did Kirby ever tell you about Andrew Corday?"

"Yes, she told me. Chris told me he was dead and I told Kirby."

"I'm free," Theo said. "As long as he was on the same earth with me I was afraid of him. Have you any idea what it means to live with a man you're afraid of, to let a man you're afraid of make love to you? Love . . . He profaned the word. Raphael isn't here. I can talk . . . My tears would not be for Kirby, Lydia. They would be for me. When you remove fear, it's like letting the blind see . . . I was young and healthy but I would not leave Andrew because I liked the luxuries he gave me. I warped my daughter's young life because I liked Mrs. Andrew Corday on my calling card and the power that went with the name. I liked the beautiful clothes and jewels and the lovely rooms and people bowing to the little New England girl. I liked all of that and I let Andrew profane everything I had been brought up to believe in to have it."

"Even if Kirby knew that she has always loved you and defended you."

"Of course she knew. She has always known. Her mind penetrates more than the surface. Because she knew me so well that's why, I think, for such a long time when she was growing up she didn't care how she looked. Ugliness was better than a parasite beauty. At least her ugliness was honest and her mother behind her face was not."

"Is that why she likes plain and simple things and wants to be a plain and simple person herself?"

Theo said, "A woman who has beauty too often lets that and that alone speak for her. I have my face and I need do no more for myself, she thinks. My face is enough. Everything I want will come to me because of this face I was lucky to have been born with."

"Lucky? Hear me out, Lydia. When you go and Raphael comes back, I shall look this part of myself and throw the key away forever. If I could have one wish it would be to begin all over again and with a plain face. Then I should have to develop myself and a man would love me for myself, for what I really am inside me. A woman with a face like mine is loved only for her face. No man has ever really loved me, but two men have loved Kirby. I am forty and what I have will go. But what Kirby has inside her—a kind of light that made Alan and Wade forget that her mouth is thick—will get better as time goes on. Beauty is transient, but character is permanent. Do you know why I love Raphael so much?"

"No, Theo. No, I don't."

"I love him for his lightness, the lightness of his touch, his step, his thoughts. Everything in my life has been so heavy. For all my apparent lightness I have always felt weighed down as if by stones. Four years I have felt like that, the first years with my first husband who was stolid and undemonstrative and those years in torment with Andrew."

MUSICAL NOTES AND NOISES

What's Symphonic to Some Is Sour to the Writer

By KENNETH F. HEWINS

Written for Central Press and This Newspaper

BACK IN 1897, according to literature, a fellow by the name of William Congreve wrote a play, "The Mourning Bride," and in Act I, Scene 1 this quotation appeared: "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast, to soften rocks, or bend a knotted oak."

While literature thought well enough of that gem of wisdom to preserve it through the years, I cannot accept the declaration without reservations.

Music may soothe the savage breast—like the man said—but it depends pretty largely upon the kind of music and the nature of the brute that is to be soothed.

There are some people who like—or pretend to like—only the so-called long-hair variety of music. I think these people have a perfect right to remain on earth. I am all for them. I suppose I should envy them. They are valued components of society and they are so easily pleased in their musical desires.

The kind of music they seem to swoon to is, to the rest of us, a combination of discordant sounds. I would use the word "cacophony" at this point, but there is no need for both of us to run to the dictionary.

Then, on the other side of the tracks, there are some people who think of music as Webster did, that it is "melody or harmony; any succession of tones so modulated as to please the ear."

There are, of course, several varieties of ears: pink ears, lop ears, cauliflower ears, etc.—which keeps

Webster in the clear. But what I think he meant to do was to define music as something one can pat his foot to.

As I say, I have no bone to pick with the high-brow clientele who roll in the aisles when some fugitive from a barber shop strikes up 15-minute concertos all through the night. It is their own business to like it, if they can; and I hope business booms for them as well as their skilled entertainers.

While I give the classical music lovers every quarter to exercise their love, I wish they would extend the same courtesy to those of us who prefer melody makers to music makers.

Recently, I have voluntarily subjected myself to a culturizing process to improve my social standing. I have been going to swanky concerts, hearing such masters and mistresses as Albert Spalding, Alec Templeton, Helen Jepson and the like.

All of them played or sang mostly the type of tuneless stuff which Mark Twain would have described as being "better than it sounded."

A fellow newsman, who attended one of the concerts, undertook to report a layman's view of the proceedings, using only his constitutional rights for a background.

The scribe had the audacity to state that "the first part of the program consisted of a series of 'heavy' numbers that had a definite wearying effect upon the audience."

A woman reader of the paper objected to the principle of freedom of the press and would have ridden the daring newsman out of town on a rail had it not been for an OPA ruling prohibiting the misuse of lumber.

With my singing being what it is, I have always refrained from public comment upon the vocal offerings of others.

When I saw and heard Helen Jepson, for instance, I kept still about her singing. Impressed with her striking charm, poise, dress and personality, I did feel competent to say that this Metropolitan opera star and mother of two children is, to me, America's singing Mother Hubbard. I think her singing had to be good to get what she got, incidentally.

When one goes to a high-falutin' concert, he is presented with a pointed menu foretelling what is about to happen. The only word on one of these programs that I could understand was the word "Intermission"; and I regret to admit that I even missed that.

When I thought intermission was there, I arose—along with plenty of company—and withdrew from the auditorium. Actually, it was not intermission at all. The artist had merely stepped off stage for a brief interlude to rosin up his bow.

In almost every concert performance that I have been attending in my self-provoked educational undertaking, I have been comforted by observing that there were people there who cannot even determine when the performer has reached the end of his piece. Just let the musician turn a page too slowly and some bird will think the number is over and will solo a few claps, to his embarrassment.

The long-hair adherents say more firmly than kindly that I will learn to like their brand if I hear enough of it. They know that

I will learn to like stuff I have never been able to enjoy for more than 40 years.

Frankly, I am getting rather discouraged. I am also getting older, with each passing concert.

I cannot wait forever to learn to like what I do not like.

By the same token, I am not going to plant a few acres of acorns at my age and wait for a national forest to spring therefrom.

I must have more speed with my culture, if any.

For some time, the manufacturers of pocketbooks have been trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear. I have never seen much advantage, after all, in trying to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear; and I imagine most sows, at least, will join me in this conclusion.

Nevertheless, I have been trying to take a liking to the better things of life. I have been trying hard to like music that isn't, to my untrained ears.

At the dinner table the other day, I was making some off-the-record comments about some of the concerts which still are so foreign to my desires. Our No. 1 daughter suddenly let me know that she liked "that kind of music," I said:

"Marlin, you must not say things that are not true."

"But I really do," she answered. "I am in the glue club, you know."

And then our No. 2 daughter said:

"I like that high-class music, myself."

And I said:

"Pass the beans, please. At least I can eat."

The very best way to remove soil streaks on seams of underwear and girdles, and the inside of neckbands and collars, is to dampen the fabric and rub soap directly on the soiled places, allowing it to remain awhile before putting into the tub or washer. For especially stubborn soil, gentle rubbing with a brush is easier on the fabric than a washboard. And remember, that not allowing articles to get too soiled—in other words, frequent washings—will prevent dirt from becoming too deeply imbedded in the fibers.

Public Urged To Mail Christmas Cards and Packages Early

HEAVIEST MAIL IN HISTORY IS DUE THIS YEAR

Postmaster Hays Issues Plea To Wrap Packages Well And Mail At Once

An appeal for the immediate mailing of Christmas packages and cards was voiced Wednesday by Postmaster A. Hulse Hays.

Declaring that the heaviest holiday mailing in history is anticipated the postmaster said the Circleville postoffice will likely be swamped by the rush of Yuletide parcels.

"If the coal strike continues and results in increasing shortages of fuel," Postmaster Hays asserted, "it is very possible that the Postoffice Department in Washington will eventually place an embargo on all parcel mailing."

He said that it is therefore highly important that persons desiring to mail gifts and cards to relatives and friends prepare and mail them at once. The postmaster pointed out that only in this way can the senders be certain the gifts will reach relatives and friends by Dec. 25.

If such an embargo is invoked it will also prevent the moving of express packages also.

Early mailing of packages can do no harm and may insure delivery in the event of an embargo the postmaster said. He pointed out that senders may mark the packages "Do Not Open Until Christmas."

The Postoffice Department in Washington several days ago predicted "mountains of mail" this Yuletide season throughout the nation and urged early mailing of Christmas gift packages and greeting cards.

The department suggested all local packages and letters be mailed not later than Dec. 15 and that parcels destined for distant places should be mailed not later than Dec. 1.

However, the fuel situation has altered the situation and the public is now being asked to prepare and mail cards and packages immediately. Postmaster Hays said.

To facilitate handling and delivery of holiday mail the postmaster urged the following precautions:

1—Wrap parcels carefully and register or insure valuables.
2—Address packages completely and the sender should put his or her address in the upper left-hand corner.

3—If the sender thinks his or her friends may have moved, send cards by first-class mail. This will insure delivery.

4—Use air mail for distant points.

The Christmas season is always a headache for postal employees, it was declared, and this year with the expected avalanche of gift and card mailings coupled with the ever-present threat of crippled transportation facilities and a possible parcel embargo resulting from the coal strike and fuel shortage, the job of the mail clerk and mail carrier will likely be worse than a headache.
